Hijackers and 10 Hostages Die as Philippine Plane Is Set Afire

Special to The New York Times

MANILA, May 23—A Philippine Airlines jetliner was hijacked by six men today in an attempt to force the plane to fly to the Philippines. The hijackers exploded a bomb on the plane, and 10 of the hijackers and 10 of the passengers died in the explosion. The plane was set on fire and burst into flames after the hijackers exploded grenades.

The hijacking began Friday when the six men seized the plane on a flight from Davao in the south to Manila and ordered it to fly to Zamboanga, about 530 miles south of Manila. They demanded $375,000 and a safe flight to the Middle East. The Government refused to meet their demands and said today that the men had turned down offers of a compromise.

After the plane landed at Zamboanga, it was surrounded by troops and the tires of the plane were shot out. The Government said the gunman started when the hijackers began exploding grenades.

Passengers who returned to Manila this evening recounted interviews how tension on the plane mounted this morning after the gunmen rejected pleas of intermediaries, some of whom were family relations.

Toward noon, they took Lieut. Col. Canuto Estocapio, who was one of the passengers, and threatened to shoot him.

They released, however, and Colonel Estocapio, was among

High in Dispute: Lebanon Role

Special to The New York Times

COMSTOCK, N. Y., May 21—Correction officers at Great Meadows Correctional Institution, the huge maximum security prison here where some 150 inmates rioted last Monday, charged yesterday that the administration knew the disturbance was coming but refused to add guards because of possible overtime expense.

The superintendent of the prison, Paul Metz, acknowledged that there had been early warnings. "There had been rumors," he said, "but nothing concrete—nothing to warrant closing down the facility that night." Mr. Metz denied sharply that overtime savings had anything to do with the decision not to put extra men on duty Monday night.

In all, 43 prisoners and correction officers were injured in the riot, which began as a fight between rival groups. One prisoner and one correction officer remained hospitalized yesterday, the prisoner in critical condition.

Disident correction officers at the prison, which houses more than 1,500 inmates are bitter over what they say is the indifference of the State Division of Correctional Services to the dangers at Great Meadows. "There were only seven officers to control 603 inmates in that yard," said one. "The prisoners do pretty much as they please. We have no control here at all."

According to another guard, 250 correction officers have been injured at Great Meadows in the last year, between 150 and 200 of them while breaking up fights with inmates. "Hardly a day goes by around here," he said, "when an officer isn't

Guards Bitter After Prison Riot

A Marxist Guyana Bucks Trend in South America

By JONATHAN KANDELL

Special to The New York Times

GEORGETOWN, Guyana, May 21—Prime Minister Forbes Burnham, the man the Central Intelligence Agency helped put in power 12 years ago to avert a Communist takeover, has established the only Marxist government in South America.

By the end of this month, in time to commemorate Guyana's 10th anniversary of independence from Britain, the Government will have more than 70 percent of the economy under its control. Yet until now, this gradual takeover has occurred with none of the upheaval and economic setbacks that undermined the Marxist government of the late President Salvador Allende Gossens in Chile.

Mr. Burnham is building a party along frankly Marxist-Leninist lines, moving ahead with a "people's militia," and strengthening his ties with Cuba and other Communist nations. But there is not a single political prisoner in the country, and his opponents readily admit that they can and do

T.A. Accuses the City on Bus Franchises

By EDWARD C. BURKS

Special to The New York Times

NEW YORK, May 23—The Transit Authority charged yesterday that the city's Bureau of Franchises repeatedly awarded the best bus routes to private bus companies, and it called on Mayor Beame to investigate.

"We are getting the dirty end of the stick," John G. deRoos, senior executive officer of the tax-supported Transit Authority, said. He accused Morris Tarshis, director of the bureau, of a discriminatory policy against Transit Authority applications and to the advantage of more than a half-dozen private bus companies.

The Transit Authority said that since 1967 the bureau had denied 29 of its applications, delayed eight of them for months and years and had awarded a minimum of nine of the contested routes to private operators.

The main complaint has to do with express bus routes. Asking the Mayor and the Board of Estimate to review the entire route-awarding policy, Mr. deRoos took the position that the Transit Authority, hard-hit by operating deficits, should get a much better share of the so-called "cream" routes. Mr. Tarshis immediately re-

Panel Reports Key Charges Are Not Resolved, but Chairman Files Dissent

By HAROLD M. SCHMECK Jr.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 23—In a report made public today, a panel of distinguished lawyers and scientists sharply criticized the Commissioner of Food and Drugs for "serious deficiencies" in a report that he made after investigating charges of mismanagement within the drug agency.

The new report, by the Government-appointed panel, constitutes a detailed critique of a 900-page report that the Commissioner, Dr. Alexander M. Schmidt, made public last October.

In the document made public today, the panel concluded that Dr. Schmidt was ill-advised in doing his investigation entirely within the agency; that important accusations against the F.D.A. were left unresolved by his report; that his broad conclusions favorable to the agency were unsupported by the evidence, and that fundamental questions were virtually ignored.

Improvements Cited

The panel said that all of the accusations of agency mismanagement analyzed in its report and that of Dr. Schmidt concerned incidents that had occurred before he became Commissioner, and that improvements had since been made in the F.D.A.'s procedures. The panel's document said that the Commissioner had laid to rest many of the charges made against the agency, but that others were still unresolved.

Dr. Schmidt released today a statement that criticized the panel's report. Dr. Thomas C. Chalmers, chairman of the panel, the Review Panel on New Drug Regulation, also disagreed with its report and wrote a dissenting opinion made public today as part of the 500-page document. He is president of the Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York.

The panel's report said that Dr. Schmidt had conducted his investigation fairly and openly, but that it had been procedurally defective in important respects and had failed to resolve "a significant number of important allegations."

2 Undercover Agents Involved Cunningham

Attempt to Buy a Bronx Discotheque Put Them on Track of Alleged Graft

By SELWYN RAAB

Two June evening in 1974, New York Times on the basis of two secret police agents began negotiations to buy a Bronx discotheque, which they planned to use as a base for spying on the Mafia. But, instead of being solely an undercover mission against organized crime, that investigation put law-enforcement officials on the trail of possible major corruption scandals in the courts and at the State Liquor Authority.

The agents, a city detective and an ex-convict who became Second in a series

One informant, who was trying to infiltrate the Mafia as part of a Federal-city operation called Project Scotch.

The $75,000 deal for the Last Laft Discotheque on Pelham Parkway in the Upper Bronx was never completed, and the police ultimately were unmasked by the mobsters. Before the project collapsed, the informant and the detective set in motion a wave of events that later engulfed Patrick J. Cunningham, the Democratic Party's state chairman, in allegations that judgeships were sold in the Bronx.

Details about Project Scotch and its ramifications were reported yesterday by The New

Support in the Voting in 4 States Over Weekend Is Less Than Expected

TOTAL IS STILL HIGHEST

Ford Regains Lead, Getting 576 Delegates in All to 535 for Reagan

By R. W. APPLE JR.

Jimmy Carter's poor showings in the Michigan and Maryland primaries last week cost him support over the weekend as delegates to the Democratic National Convention were selected in four states.

The former Georgia Governor emerged from a series of state and district conventions with more delegates than any other candidate, adding 27 for a total of 740, about three times as many as his nearest rival, Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, who gained 17 on Saturday.

But Mr. Carter did less well than predicted.

President Ford dominated the action in the four states that held Republican conventions, picking up 55 delegates to 14 for his challenger, former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California. And 88 members of Pennsylvania's 103-member delegation, voting at a meeting in Harrisburg, committed themselves to the President.

Ford Back In Lead

That put Mr. Ford back into the national lead, 576 delegates to 535, for the first time since the Texas primary on May 1, and he is expected to pick up more than 100 additional delegates today when New York's Republican delegation caucuses in Albany.

That meeting is viewed by a number of state Republicans as a test of Vice President Rockefeller's control over the New York party. He and Richard M. Rosenbaum, the state chairman who is Mr. Rockefeller's close ally, are key figures in the attempt to put the delegation behind Mr. Ford. (Page 21).

For Mr. Carter, the most disappointing development came at the district conventions in Virginia. Joseph T. Fitzpatrick, the state Democratic chairman, and Andrew P. Miller, the Attorney General, had organized an uncommitted movement at mass meetings on April 3, the first step in the delegate selection process, but later endorsed Mr. Carter and had hoped to deliver at least 35 of Virginia's 54 delegates to the Georgian.

Only 23 for Carter

Instead, they produced only 23 Carter delegates. Mr. Udall won 7, mostly from the Washington suburbs, and 24 went uncommitted.

According to Mr. Fitzpatrick however, 10 of the 24 uncommitted delegates, including himself, are actually Carter supporters who were forced to seek election on a technical uncommitted basis because of local intraparty squabbles. He said Mr. Carter was assured of at least 33 Virginia votes at the first convention ballot.

Most of the other uncommitted members of the delegation, support Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, with one or two for Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California.

Mr. Fitzpatrick conceded that Mr. Carter's loss to Mr. Brown in Maryland and his

West Point Acknowledges Cheating Is Widespread

By JAMES FERON

Special to The New York Times

WEST POINT, N.Y., May 23—The Superintendent of the United States Military Academy, Lieut. Gen. Sidney Berry, acknowledged today that cheating at West Point was more widespread than previously indicated.

In an official statement, General Berry announced the formation of an internal review panel of officers and cadets to study "new evidence" that he said was recently developed by faculty members in the electrical engineering department.

Many of the 48 cadets who have been formally charged with improper collaboration on an engineering examination in March said that "hundreds" actually had been involved, but that the Academy was fearful of the publicity accompanying a wider inquiry.

Today's action, announced by a West Point spokesman, appears to confirm the cadet's charges. It also tends to support the action of Army lawyers on the post requesting an investigation of West Point's handling of its cheating scandal.

The lawyers' request for an outside inquiry was rejected last week by Secretary of the Army Martin R. Hoffman, although he said such an investigation might be useful "in the future."

A total of 823 cadets, all second-classmen, or juniors, had taken the engineering examination, which was to have been completed in the barracks. Faculty members became aware of the cheating when one cadet breathing on her own after her latest disconnection from the machine last week.

She has passed this test, according to the sources, and was moved Saturday night. She is expected to be reconnected to the machine if she gets into difficulties, they said.

The young woman's medical prognosis has not changed, however, according to the sources. She is still described as in a "chronic vegetative state," which, by definition, means she can never recover her ability to function as a thinking human being.

The hospital gave no reason for removing Miss Quinlan or for taking her off the respirator. With the secrecy surrounding the case still tight, there was no clear explanation today for the new pattern of treatment.

Paul W. Armstrong, the attorney for the young woman's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Quinlan, confirmed that Miss Quinlan's condition had not changed, but he refused to comment on whether she was able to breathe on her own or had been moved out of the intensive-care unit.

South Africans Hoping for an Understanding With U.S.

By JOHN F. BURNS
Special to The New York Times
CAPE TOWN, May 23—The big story in the newspapers here last week was the bizarre affair in London involving a South African diplomat and an alleged attempt to procure a film of a British politician's sexual activities. How-Analysis ever, even the news vendors found space on their billboard for reports that President Ford had spoken of the possibility of meeting with South Africa's Prime Minister, John Vorster.

Associated Press
John Vorster

At their stands along the palm-shaded boulevards beneath Table Mountain, the news vendors soon went back to hawking the London story. But the President's remarks, coupled with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's recent announcement that he would open a dialogue with South Africa, have made a major impact with politicians and white public opinion alike.

In fact, it was a week of marked change in South African attitudes toward the Ford Administration. The prospect of high-level talks, though qualified by Mr. Ford's observation they are only "a possibility as we move down the road," has done much to soothe the indignation generated by United States actions and pronouncements on southern Africa in recent months.

Relations have been cool for years as a result of United States opposition to apartheid, but there was a sharp deterioration following the Angolan civil war last fall. After Congress ordered a halt to United States supplies for the Angolan non-Communist faction, officials in Pretoria complained bitterly that South Africa, which had committed troops, had been deserted.

Mr. Vorster recently suggested that South Africa had been inveigled into the war by Washington, an accusation the United States had previously denied.

Then came Mr. Kissinger's trip to Africa last month. He became an antihero to most white South Africans overnight with his speech in the Zambian capital of Lusaka, in which he declared United States support for majority rule throughout white-ruled southern Africa.

Then Antagonism Fades
It was a speech that would have been badly received here wherever it was made, but the fact that the Secretary of State offered prescriptions for black Africa for an area he has never visited officially made it worse.

Last week, however, antagonism gave way to hope. Official statements and editorials have conveyed a sense that Washington and Pretoria can somehow reach a common ground on the problems of southern Africa, and together relieve the threat of a major war in Rhodesia.

Moreover, there is a feeling that dialogue with the United States offers South Africa a chance to talk its way back into the club of Western nations without relenting on the essential principles of apartheid.

Mr. Vorster implied something of this when he spoke to the Cape Town press club early last week. Talks between himself and Mr. Ford, he said, would be a recognition of the fact that South Africa "can play a part in the affairs of southern Africa for the good."

Moreover, he said, the talks "could do a lot of good, not only for South Africa, but for the free world in general of which we are a part."
Die Burger, a Cape Town newspaper with close ties to the ruling Nationalist Party, put it more explicitly in an editorial on Mr. Ford's remarks. "The fear of being caught in South Africa's company," it said, "is currently greater in Washington and London than in some capitals in Africa. But it is not outside the bounds of possibility to build up in Africa a Western-minded association of states with South Africa as the key factor."

The paper continued: "This was actually in the process of developing during the Angola war when America herself, on account of lack of vision, sabotaged it in her Congress. We do not underestimate the problems of such a policy direction, but its response in southern Africa might exceed the highest American expectations. It is worth trying."

Wishful Thinking Seen
The common view among diplomats here is that much of this is wishful thinking, encouraged by the strong yearning South Africans of English and Afrikaans origin alike have traditionally had for close ties with the United States. The probability the diplomats say is that Mr. Vorster and his colleagues, who are known as hardheaded men, are privately more skeptical of the prospects for productive talks than they are publicly willing to admit.

Nonetheless it is an opportunity, however slim, for the Government to break out of its diplomatic isolation and attempt to do something about two problems of pressing concern—the widening guerrilla war in Rhodesia and the dispute over the future of South-West Africa.

While it is far from certain that Washington and Pretoria can reach an understanding on either issue, and compromises on the political evolution of South Africa itself is seemingly beyond hope, negotiations in themselves have a value for Mr. Vorster.

Having failed in an attempt to reconcile Prime Minister Ian D. Smith of Rhodesia and his black nationalist adversaries, the South African Prime Minister has publicly taken a hands-off attitude, saying that the problem is one for the Rhodesians themselves to solve. However, engaging in discussions with Washington—being seen to make a maximum diplomatic effort—may ease the pressures from his right wing, which would prefer a policy of moral if not military support for Mr. Smith.

While South Africa has spoken in favor of majority rule in Rhodesia, Mr. Vorster has made it clear that he will not use the most powerful means at his disposal to bring that about—a trade boycott, or a closing of the two railway lines to Rhodesia's principal lifeline since the closing of the Mozambique border.

There are a range of lesser pressures Mr. Vorster could apply but political imperatives at home seem likely to preclude them. One move would be the denial of the traffic volume on the railways that Mr. Smith needs, defensible in terms of the port and rail congestion that is already a problem here. More persuasive still would be a squeeze on the supplies of arms, ammunition and spare parts, for which South Africa is Rhodesia's sole source.

Washington could find Pretoria more amenable on the problem of South-West Africa, which the United Nations has ruled to be illegally occupied by South Africa. Mr. Vorster reiterated his willingness last week to have the South-West African People's Organization participate in constitutional talks on the territory's future. If the ethnic groups now participating agree, while this seems unlikely, at least in the short term, there is no longer the insuperable barrier to the organization's participation, which the United States has held to be indispensable.

On South Africa's future, there seems to be little or no ground for a fruitful exchange. While Mr. Kissinger acknowledged in Lusaka that white South Africans were an African people with a right to live here, he demanded an end to "the institutionalized separation of the races." For his part, Mr. Vorster has made it plain that there will be no compromise on the essentials of apartheid. In this, the Government has the overwhelming support of the white community. It has made concessions on some of the minor irritants of apartheid in the last two years—desegregating park benches and sporting activities and some hotels, restaurants and libraries. But it has forged ahead with its homelands policy, the core of apartheid, under which about 13 percent of the territory of South Africa has been set aside for the establishment of self-governing "homelands" for the 10 tribal groups in the black population.

FRENCH IN DISPUTE ON LEBANON ROLE

alist leader, noting that Lebanese leftist factions were opposed to the French proposal, said he could not envision a French force having "the slightest chance of succeeding in its mission," adding that such a force could aggravate the situation.

The President's proposal, which was given wide publicity in the press over the weekend, is so far attracting public support from two of his appointed cabinet members — Finance Minister Jean-Pierre Fourcade and Justice Minister Jean Lecanuet — and from former Prime Minister Michel Debré, a Gaullist.

But there has been no comment from the two men who have been sent by the President to Lebanon in the last six months to try to mediate in a settlement of the civil war, former Prime Minister Maurice Couve de Murville, and Georges Porse, a Middle East expert. Nor has there been any comment from the leadership of the Gaullist Party, now headed by Yves Guéné, a much-decorated World War II officer.

Assembly Debates Expected The intervention issue is expected to erupt this week in the National Assembly, which in the midst of debate on the Government's proposed defense budget. Already being disputed is the debate on the mission of a French armed force. The leftist opposition has expressed annoyance that the French forces mission seems excessively geared to defending France against the Communist countries of Eastern Europe, and that it is too closely allied with the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The Lebanon issue may also be discussed by the President in a speech he is to make on national radio Tuesday night.

Neither the attackers nor defenders of Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's proposal have noted that had apparently cleared the initiative with the United States and Syria and had informed the Soviet Union. Mr. Kanapa, a member of the French Communist Politburo, said in a statement harshly critical of the President's over-all foreign policy that the Communists "refuse to have our country become involved in that which would become a new version of the Vietnam War, a war which, after all, could turn into a racial conflict."

Pierre Mauroy, an influential Socialist National Assembly member and party strategist, said the President's proposal amounted to "the internationalization of Gaullism, that of the century" and accused the President of "declaring himself to send an expeditionary force to Lebanon."

The Socialist secretary for international affairs, Lionel Jospin, said in a statement, "We do not think this kind of a conflict can be settled by the armed intervention of a superpower, much less a middle-grade one." Citing the President's proposal as "rather unfortunate," Mr. Jospin said his party favored settlement through the United Nations or in a conference of the warring factions in Lebanon.

Supporting Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, Justice Minister Lecanuet said the French forces could perform a United Nations-type "blue helmet" operation, adding that "naturally, a marine-type operation is out of the question."

Karami Rejects Proposal

BEIRUT, Lebanon, May 23 (UPI)—Prime Minister Rashid Karami today rejected France's offer to send peacekeeping troops to Lebanon.

"We are prepared to die in defense of our freedom and national unity," he said. "We will never go back to the days of the [French] mandate. We all those who want to send in foreign troops 'thank you because you care, but we are not prepared to give up one inch of our soil.'"

The Christian Phalangist Party chief, Pierre Gemayel, favored the French proposal.

"There is no sincere man who would accept the presence of foreign troops on the soil of his homeland," he said. "But when the country is exposed to sabotage, destruction and partition, it would be stupid and obstinate to refuse to accept non-Lebanese forces."

The most outspoken reaction to the offer of peacekeeping forces came from the radical Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine, which called Mr. Giscard d'Estaing an "openly American agent" and warned it would "fight French troops if they entered Lebanon."

Israelis Deride Proposal

Special to The New York Times

TEL AVIVE, May 23—Israelis today derided France's offer to send soldiers to Lebanon to separate the combatants in the civil war.

Officials speaking privately derided President Giscard d'Estaing's offer as just another move in France's assiduous but fruitless campaign to regain a foothold in the Middle East.

Officially there was no comment. Foreign Minister Yigal Allon discussed the matter at a weekly Cabinet meeting in Jerusalem but he said there was no call at this time for a public expression of Israel's position.

Officials explained Israel had been advised by the French of the proposal.

Egyptians Again Accuse Syria; Arab Aides Mediate in Feud

CAIRO, May 23—The Foreign Ministers of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait arrived in Cairo today to mediate in the feud between Egypt and Syria, and Cairo's newspapers published charges of a Syrian plot to partition Lebanon between Moslems and Christians.

Statements attributed to an unnamed "official spokesman" charged that Syria was plotting with the right-wing Lebanese factions to partition Lebanon and destroy the Palestinian movement.

Israeli arms and ammunition are being used by the "isolationist forces" backed by Syria against the Palestinians and Lebanese leftists, the statement said.

The charges were carried under the banner headlines in Al-Ahram and Al-Akbar, two of the three leading Cairo dailies.

Observers here said publication of the charges did not bode well for the Saudi-Kuwaiti attempt to reschedule a four-power meeting in Riyadh.

19 Killed as a Fuel Truck Crashes Into Train in Seoul

SEOUL, South Korea, Monday, May 24 (UPI)—A speeding fuel truck and a train filled with families on their way to country picnics collided here yesterday and burst into flames, killing at least 19 people.

The police said that 15 passengers on the train, the truck driver and a helper and two 5-year-old children who had been playing nearby died in the wreck. Ninety-five other people were injured.

The train burned so fiercely that rescue workers were unable to approach it. Several of the victims died while struggling to climb through broken windows of the blazing passenger coaches.

Witnesses said that the truck, loaded with 200 drums of fuel oil, had sped toward a crossing in Seoul's northern outskirts in an apparent attempt to clear the track ahead of the five-car train. But the truck hit the first car of the train and exploded.

Leftists Win Election

WASHINGTON, May 23 (AP) — President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing has pledged to stay in office in France until his term expires in 1981, the Socialist-Communist coalition alliance wins the centenary election two years from now.

President, in an interview on NBC's "Meet the Press" program, said: "I have been elected for seven years and I will remain for seven more."

opinion polls indicating strong popular support for the coalition. Mr. Giscard's statement opened a possibility that France might first time have a President Prime Minister with a majority in Parliament. Giscard d'Estaing, who was elected in 1974, had ruled out a coalition with the Communists for the left-wing alliance. He would exercise constitutional responsibility for appointing a Prime Minister after the outcome of the election.

then Parliament has the vote of no confidence against him," he said.

He would also be a possibility of installing the Socialist François Mitterrand, as minister, but presumably he were to break his ties with the Communists.

French President also said the broadcast that his were some of the reasons for opposition to the British Concorde super-jetliner.

think the level of noise resonance is somewhat higher than the American public," he said.

if he thought American opposition was rooted in fear or misapprehension, he replied: "I think it is a question of I must say that the Concorde question is a very delicate one."

Interview was recorded before Mr. Giscard returned to Paris yesterday.

DHEIM TRAVELS

YRIA TOMORROW

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., May 23 — United Nations sources today that Secretary General Kurt Waldheim would visit Syria on Tuesday to renew the mandate of the United Nations force on the Golan Heights.

mandate expires at the end of this month and despite the fact that there is a dispute between Mr. Waldheim and the Syrian representative at the United Nations, Kurt Waldheim, on Thursday no agreement on its extension has been reached.

to the New York Times, Waldheim's visit to the Government today in its delegation to the United Nations to advise Secretary General Waldheim that it is his trip to Damascus as a mistake.

Waldheim said it was felt that his visit would expose Mr. Waldheim to pressure from the Assad for Syria's consent to extend the mandate of the United Nations force.

Israelis also sent word to Waldheim that there was a dispute in his coming to Jerusalem at this time. Israel has notified the United Nations of its agreement to extend the mandate.

In New Orleans on Friday, a local reporter walked up to Valéry Giscard d'Estaing and asked if they could pose together for a picture. The French President obliged.

A Reporter's Notebook: Giscard Aims to Please

By FLORA LEWIS

President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing flew home to Paris this weekend after a week-long state visit to the United States in which he followed an agile line between the conflicting demands of French and American politics. In the end, he managed to please, if not fully satisfy, both sides.

A major purpose of the trip, Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had said, was to correct American misconceptions of "the reality of modern France," and, to a considerable extent, it worked in both directions.

In a pre-taped interview broadcast on NBC's "Meet the Press" yesterday, he said that he would remain in office until the end of his term in 1981, even if the opposition Communists and Socialists won parliamentary power in the meantime.

It was a way of reassuring Americans about the future of French policy, delivered in a manner that would ease French irritation at what is considered an effort by the United States to interfere in European politics with a renewed anti-Communist campaign.

In relaxed English, richly flavored with the Gallic accent, he told Americans that France was determined to be a good and loyal ally even while he reassured the French audience that "independence" remained the policy key.

Announcing that France would send troops to the Lebanon if asked, he assured Paris not only that it could still play an important world role, but that it was possible to work things out so it could be done in agreement rather than in rivalry with the United States.

Apart from the sessions at the White House, however, it was more a social and sentimental trip than diplomatic business.

At Yorktown, Va., local children were decked out in the costumes of the French provinces to greet him. One little girl, almost eclipsed by the big black bow that is the headdress of Alsace, was asked what province she represented. The French giggled when she answered, "I think it's the South. We're Southerners too."

The culture gap was bridged more comfortably at Lafayette, La., where schoolchildren brought to greet the President in the local best contact with the American public. Otherwise, there were mostly lunches and dinners with large but selected groups of notables, businessmen, politicians and women in gowns imported from Paris at which the dishes had French names although the wines were always American.

Tours of big cities and advertised motorcades were avoided, for security reasons, although Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had said the reason he did not go to New York was not to risk the indignity of passing unnoticed in contrast with the extravagant ticker-tape parades of another generation.

The details of the trip had been meticulously planned for five months, and if it was not the overwhelming triumph the French had hoped to see, neither were there any hitches or embarrassments. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing projected his image, inspired by the late John F. Kennedy, of a modern, confident, outgoing leader, well-versed in technical problems and more concerned with solutions than strident slogans.

He almost toyed with the echoes of the late President de Gaulle's most aggressive nationalism when in Louisiana he called out, "Vive l'Acadie, Vive la Louisiane, Vive la Louisiane." And then, while memories of de Gaulle's controversial "Vive le Québec Libre," which nearly split Canada, came flooding, went on to shout, "Vive les Etats Unis, Vive la France!"

It was a voyage of reconciliation, and of quiet reconnaissance.

"Of course, we talked politics," Mr. Giscard d'Estaing said of his table talk with President Ford. "The candor of these Americans is remarkable. They are very direct."

That was in New Orleans, the night before he left, when he was summing up his impressions with evident pleasure. There hadn't been any major decisions or policy changes. But the trip had, as he intended, confirmed a new, easier atmosphere in French-American relations without raising the hackles of those French, on the right or the left, who hold to the Gaullist orthodoxy that "independence" must mean abrasive stiffness toward the United States.

Mr. Giscard d'Estaing had been asked at a press club breakfast in Washington what he considered the lowest point in relations between the two countries, since they now seem to have improved substantially.

He thought a moment, measured his words carefully, and said that it was in 1810, when the United States refused to take Napoleon's side against the British Navy. It was an elegant way of jumping over the Gaullist years, but it made the point that they too have receded in his mind.

3 Hijackers, 10 Hostages Dead As Philippine Plane Is Set A Fire

the passengers returning to Manila this evening by Philippine Air Lines. Thirty other passengers were still resting in Zamboanga, the southern capital.

In an interview at the Philippine Village Hotel, where he and the other passengers were taken, Colonel Estocapio recounted: "Minutes after twelve o'clock, the armored carrier used to block the runway was moved up against the cockpit and I sensed gas inside the plane. This was followed by a series of gunshots and then the sound of grenades exploding. One of the hijackers killed the two passengers nearest to him."

Promise of New Tires
John Mallett of Cleveland, the manager of the local subsidiary of the United Brands Company, said he sensed something ominous when the plane's tires were deflated after arrival at Zamboanga, Friday afternoon.

"The hijackers were told new tires were sent for, and they believed this but I realized it was a bluff," Mr. Mallett said as he tried to soothe his eyes reddened by sleeplessness.

"There was obviously a feeling on the part of the government that the frequent hijacks had to be stopped," he said. "I agree with the military necessity to accomplish that objective."

He was seated near the emergency door, and when the explosions started he opened the door and jumped out. "Funny I managed to hang on to my briefcase — there are important papers inside," Mr. Mallett said. A Filipino businessman from Quezon City, Romario Limon, said that in the dash from the exploding plane, the women and older men had very poor chances.

"One of the 10 casualties was the young girl seated next to me," he said. "She was still in the plane when it burst into flames."

Linked to Moslem Rebels

Mr. Limon spoke regretfully about the "young handsome hijackers who just could not be talked into abandoning their plans." During their captivity in the sweltering airport in Zamboanga, he and some other passengers had spent time talking with the young Moslems who described how carefully they had planned the hijacking.

The planning they described resembled that used in the takeover of another Philippine Air Lines plane six weeks ago. The three hijackers succeeded in getting a flight to Libya where they sought asylum.

In the last three years, Moslem rebels claiming affiliation with the Moro National Liberation Front have hijacked three planes and four fishing boats. They have also held several foreign residents for ransom.

These and the ambushes of civilian transports in some areas of southern Mindanao are seen by some observers here as political acts of the Moslem rebel leaders to offset the Government's pacification drive. There have been some concessions by the central government to the 2.8 million Moslems in the southern Philippines whose spokesman have charged that they have been denied opportunities and are hard pressed by the influx of Christian settlers.

GUAM TYPHOON LOSS PUT AT $300 MILLION

AGANA, Guam, May 23 (UPI)—Gov. Ricardo J. Bordallo said today that a typhoon that struck Guam over the weekend had caused more than $300 million in damage, leaving 30 percent of the island's buildings in ruins, three persons dead and 60 injured.

Winds that reached 190 miles an hour left the island without power or a fresh-water supply and its coastline littered with sunken or beached ships and boats.

President Ford declared Guam a major disaster area to allow use of Federal relief and recovery funds, including provisions for temporary housing.

MANILA, May 23 (UPI)—Torrential rains deluged the Philippines, northern island of Luzon today with the departure of a typhoon that left 47 persons dead and tens of thousands homeless.

The typhoon, called Olga, was reduced to a tropical storm with winds of 70 miles an hour moving northward across the mountains of Luzon.

HADASSAH ASSAILS CRITICISM OF ISRAEL

The head of Hadassah, the 350,000-member Zionist bloc, yesterday scored "Jewish personalities who have taken it upon themselves to publicly criticize certain policies of Israel at this critical juncture."

Calling attention to Israel's precarious position in the Middle East in the absence of permanent peace, Rose E. Matzkin, president of the Zionist group, charged that the statements of Jewish leaders were "being picked up and exploited by organized dissidents within the Jewish community."

In addition, she said that these statements would be used by members of Congress and the Administration "who would like to decrease various types of aid to Israel."

The Zionist leader's remarks were made at a news conference at the formal opening of an eight-story headquarters at 50 West 58th Street.

Today. A New World Of Flying Begins.

Paris by Concorde. 3 hrs. 50 min.

Today Air France launches Concorde Service between Washington and Paris...and a new age of travel begins. On Concorde you reach Paris in less than half the time it takes on conventional jets. 3 hrs. 50 min. versus 8 hours. You fly at twice the speed of sound, yet you experience a smoothness and quiet never before equalled in flight. Your view is breathtaking. Flying at an altitude of almost 60,000 feet, you can actually see the curvature of the earth. On board you enjoy a totally new kind of service, custom-made for supersonic flight, and of a splendor that befits this magnificent airplane.

And, perhaps most extraordinary of all, with Concorde, travel fatigue is greatly eliminated. You're as fresh and alert when you land, as when you started.

To enable New Yorkers to enjoy Concorde we've arranged a perfect connection between here and Washington. For reservations see your Travel Agent or call Air France.

Guyana Bucks Trend With Rising Marxism

business interests, which are small and fragmented.

Instead, the main stumbling block to national unity and the creation of a strong, one-party Marxist regime are the racial antagonisms that have been at work in Guyana for more than a hundred years.

For Mr. Burnham is black (like 40 percent of the Guyanese, who are descendants of African slaves. His party, the People's National Congress, has an overwhelmingly black following.

On the other hand, more than half the population is East Indian. For ethnic reasons, most of them support the People's Progressive Party of Dr. Cheddi Jagan, the former Government leader, whom the C.I.A. helped overthrow in 1964 because he was even more radical than Mr. Burnham and strongly sympathetic to the Soviet Union.

Both Burnham and Jagan have been talking about crossing racial barriers to broaden their political appeal," said Fielder Singh, the leader of a small opposition party, which still defends private enterprise. "But it has come to nothing. So Burnham has an obligation to look after his own, and we East Indians find ourselves second-class citizens in our own country."

Hamilton Green, the Minister of Cooperatives and National Mobilization, asserts that the Burnham Government has recently tried to bring East Indians into the bureaucracy and security forces, which are predominantly black. But he concedes that racial feelings run deep.

Addressed as 'Comrade' "The British always tried to divide us to rule better," said Mr. Green, who like other left-wing Guyanese prefers to be addressed as "Comrade."

"In school, the teacher always told us the East Indians were dirty," he said.

"And they were told that the Africans were stupid. I grew up on the South Side, the poorest section of Georgetown—and the rich were always the Indian merchants. They would charge up to 20 cents a pound of rice. They would create shortages and a blackmarket. Well, those people now know they are threatened. If we catch them, we jail them. I'm only sorry we can't have a harsher punishment than that."

The racial antagonisms which flared into bloody riots in the early 1960's are further abetted by a natural economic conflict between Georgetown and the farmlands.

According to popular belief, the blacks hated the sugar estates so much that after their emancipation, they fled to Georgetown, where they now constitute the majority.

Came in 18th Century

Most of the East Indians, who came here as indentured manual workers in the 18th century to fill the labor gap created by the end of slavery, have stayed on as small landowners and sugar workers in the coastal plains. Many of them saved enough to open small shops and other larger businesses in the city.

Georgetown, where one-fourth of the 300,000 Guyanese live, is unlike the rest of Latin America. The language is mostly pidgin English. Children in the street play cricket instead of soccer. The cacophony of music in the downtown shops is American soul, Jamaican reggae and sentimental Hindi songs.

The black women dress in bright tropical cottons, many of the Indians still use saris, and the Chinese stroll with parasols. The food is Creole or curries or Cantonese.

Lawyers are barristers. Legislators are ministers of parliament, and sometimes address themselves as "Right Honorable Comrade."

The city's architecture is largely a heritage from the Netherlands, which held sway over Guyana before the British consolidated control at the end of the 18th century. In the nicer neighborhoods, where the streets are lined with bougainvillea, poinsettias and palm trees, the houses are two-story wooden Dutch colonial structures.

The larger ones are embassies of government ministries, their interiors now cooled by air conditioners, while the overhead fans remain as motionless mementos of a colonial past. There are only a few multistoried concrete buildings—banks, usually—and none of them over four floors, so that the wooden Anglican Church towers over the city.

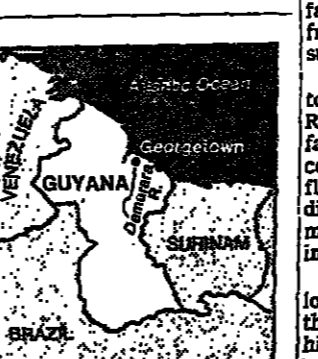

Georgetown apparently has a serious crime problem. It seems that every government driver warns visitors against the "choke 'n rob" boys.

"One man chokes and the other man robs you," explained a policeman.

"They are cowards, sir, not one of them tough. But many of them are quick. They take your wallet and run into Tiger Bay. And nobody will go in there after them."

Tiger Bay and the adjoining West Side face the port on the Demerara River, the hub of Georgetown's activity. Although the city is on the Atlantic, it has pretty much ignored the ocean. The marshy smell of the river overpowers the salty trade winds.

Tiger Bay and the other slums are collections of dilapidated, two-story wooden frame houses. Without a central water system, tem, many of the colorless homes share water faucets and outhouses in well-exposed patios.

The New York Times May 24, 1976

Even in the midmorning hours, large groups of young men, most of them blacks, mill about house entrances and storefronts.

Nation Remains Poor

Guyana was poor while it was a British colony, and it remains so today. National unemployment is estimated at about 20 percent, but in Georgetown perhaps half the potential male working force under 21 is jobless.

"Haven't ever had a real job, comrade," said Richard Long, a 19-year-old, drinking a bottle of strong ale in front of a Tiger Bay pub. "Unless you count deliveries, and I don't find those too often."

Across the Demerara River is a world as alien to Georgetown as a foreign country. The sugar cane and coffee land begins almost as soon as the ferry pulls against the dock. And almost everyone is East Indian.

It was a Sunday, and many of the wooden frame houses on stilts alongside the irrigation canals had white and red banners flying in their gardens, indicating that Hindu religious services were taking place. At one large house, a wedding feast was in progress and the women wore bright, orange saris.

In New Anglet, a farming community about 20 miles from the docks, followers of Dr. Jagan were distributing the People's Progressive Party newspaper.

"We are all Communists here," said Mahabeh Kumar Singh, 28, the party organizer in the district, who also harvests sugar cane on his five-acre plot. "We don't like to use the expression, because it upsets the bourgeois elements in the party."

The farmers in the area had a litany of complaints against the Government. They said the Government was too oriented to Georgetown and its black majority, that credits were not forthcoming and that food prices were too low. Then there were the rains that had flooded the irrigation canal, and this, too, was allegedly the Government's fault because it had failed to dredge the weeds from the waterway as it was supposed to do twice a year.

"My son went to Georgetown looking for a job," said Rahim Maktura, a 56-year-old farmer who lost most of his crops plants when the canal flooded over recently. "But he did not belong to the Government party, so now he is working as a sugar-cane cutter."

Not all of Dr. Jagan's followers are leftists, and some of them have been disturbed by his recent overtures to Mr. Burnham. The East Indian leader is planning to take up the 14 seats allotted to his party in the 55-member Parliament. Until now, he has refused to participate in Parliament because he says—and many Guyanese believe him—that Mr. Burnham stuffed the ballot boxes during the 1973 election.

Dr. Jagan appeared on the same platform with Mr. Burnham during the last May Day celebrations, and he recently announced his "critical support" for the Government.

A few miles from New Anglet, a Jagan party worker and his friends gathered at the home of Sam, the local auto mechanic. As they usually did on a Sunday afternoon, they ushered out the women, cooked themselves some chicken curry, drank copious quantities of rum, and talked politics.

Sackee, who owns four trucks, was worried about the pace of socialization under the Government. The more rum he drank, the angrier he got at Dr. Burnham and Dr. Jagan.

"Jagan has sold out," he asserted. "He is no longer taking care of his people."

Most of the others also felt uneasy about Dr. Jagan's courtship of the Government, but they all agreed that Sackee was more of a capitalist than a socialist.

The transition to socialism in Guyana still sounds frequent and discordant notes. On the radio in 1973, there has been a favorable trade balance. The favorable trade balance, because of Guyanese monopoly of the alumina used to refine steel.

The country is all to have large agricultural sources for its small Virtually self-sufficient stuffs, it exports rice bean countries.

Perhaps the most jilted by a rich man in the "hope that other girls will learn from it." In reply, the newspaper columnist warned her that "it is unfair to gauge all rich boys by the one with whom it was your misfortune to be involved."

Despite such contradictions, there is little doubt that Guyana's economy will be progressively more socialist.

Last month, to mark the 10th anniversary of independence, the Government will take over the subsidiaries of Booker-McConnell, a British conglomerate that controls 80 percent of sugar production and exports, the only department store, 60 percent of the rum industry, pharmaceuticals, shipping and warehouses.

The Booker holdings, with an estimated value of about $80 million, will be compensated by a minimum cash payment and the rest in long-term, low-interest bonds, according to Government sources.

The takeover will bring close to three-fourths of the nation's production of goods and services into Government hands. It will also virtually mark the end of private foreign holdings in Guyana.

Despite the dramatic change, few economists have suggested that Guyana is worse off than before. In fact, the country's economic performance during the last three years has been excellent compared with its past record.

Thanks in part to high sugar prices during 1974 and early 1975, there has been a favorable trade balance. The favor-

Civilian Toll in Eritrea Is Feared in Ethiopian Peasant Force's Drive Against Rebels

By BERNARD WEINRAUB
Special to The New York Times

ABRAHAM, Ethiopia, May 23—A 24-year-old man, sitting in the living room of his home, sipping a beer, his brother is fighting the Eritrean rebels in the highlands. His friends are in jail. Dependence—it's the only slight, bearded youth plennly. "We are separate people with our own future." There are more than three million Eritreans in Ethiopia, most of them in the northwestern province that is being now for a serious and potentially bloody Government offensive intended to end a 14-year insurgency. In the last week the military government has taken tens of thousands of Christian peasants to the Eritrean border to and the only part of the nation situated on a coast. Eritrean separatists insist that the province is naturally a separate entity and should be independent of Ethiopia for ethnic, historical and religious reasons. The Government insists that Eritrea's federation with Ethiopia in 1952 represented the return of a "lost" province that was a natural part of the Ethiopian empire. Eritrea's geography is crucial to Ethiopia: without the province Ethiopia would have no territory of its own on the Red Sea. This is a major reason for the support the Eritrean rebels receive from such nations as

Syria, Libya, Iraq and South Yemen. Success for the rebels would place the strategic Red Sea coastline firmly within the Arab sphere of influence. The Eritreans themselves—who are about evenly divided between Moslems and Christians—are a highlands people who are physically more Semitic than African. Their features are aquiline, their skin is lighter. Within Ethiopia, a nation feudally divided by tribe and religion, the Eritreans are often technicians, engineers, businessmen and are considered straightforward, ambitious, hard-working and a bit unrepresentative. Eritrea was made an Italian colony in 1890 and given a name based on the Roman name for the Red Sea. It remained in the hands of the Italians—who built roads, developed a modern capital in Asmara and spurred economic development in the east—until 1941, when the British defeated Mussolini's forces in Ethiopia. The province was under British administration until 1952. The United Nations Security Council voted in 1950 to allow federation with Ethiopia in that year, giving the province considerable autonomy and its own parliament. In 1962 the Eritrean Parliament, amid accusations of bribery from Addis Ababa, voted itself out of existence and Ethiopia proclaimed full integration of Eritrea with the 13 other provinces. Moslem and Christian Eritreans resented the imposition of Amharic as the official language and the elimination of the local language, Tigrinya. Amharic is the language of Ethiopia's feudally powerful and dominant Amhara group. Moreover, the Eritreans resented the influx of Amhara officials and the imposition of the Royal Ethiopian administration, which imposed restrictions on political activities and the press. In this atmosphere, young rebels moved into the field and formed the Eritrean Liberation Front, consisting largely of Moslems, seeking independence.

Later a breakaway group was formed, the Popular Liberation Front, which is more Marxist and ideological and less sympathetic because of their harsh treatment of civilians. There are numerous reports of atrocities; one of the worst other, have foreign offices in, was said to have occurred five years ago when 120 people, and Beirut. Estimates of the number of fighting guerrillas range from 10,000 to 25,000, shot by security forces. Eight Arab countries, smuggled in death, told the story, from the Sudan, are believed. "We are being bombed, women and children have died and of limited quantity. These weapons include Soviet-made rocket launchers and AK-47 rifles. According to several objective accounts, there is now considerable public support for the independence fight, and the Ethiopian troops have lost public sympathy because of their harsh treatment of civilians. San Quentin Trial: Inmates vs. Guards

Special to The New York Times
SAN RAFAEL, Calif., May 23—One of the defendants in the San Quentin Six murder trial wept on the witness stand in Marin County Superior Court here last week as he described the events of Aug. 21, 1971.

On that day six men were killed at the prison, including George Jackson, the black revolutionary author, two inmate trustees and three guards. The trial is now in its 14th month, the longest criminal trial in California history.

Willie Tate, the only defendant not now in prison, said that guards had kicked him and called him a "nigger" when they reclaimed the prison's maximum security adjustment center after the reported attempt to escape.

Mr. Tate and the five other defendants—Hugo Pinell, Johnny Spain, Luis Talamantez, Fleeta Drumgo and David Johnson—face charges of murder, conspiracy and assault. All were in the center the day of the killings. The prosecution has contended the group was part of a conspiracy to escape from the prison by force.

Conspiracy charged
 The defense has contended that the state conspired to kill Mr. Jackson, the leader of militants in the prison, and that the defendants had been selected for prosecution because of their political activity behind bars.

Mr. Tate denied on the stand the earlier testimony of a guard, Charles Breckenridge, that he had helped the him up before Mr. Breckenridge's throat was slashed by another inmate.

Mr. Tate, aged 30, was released from prison in December 1974 after having served 10 years for assault with a deadly weapon. He is free on $50,000 bail. His attorney, John Hill, contended that Mr. Breckenridge had mistaken his client for another prisoner of similar appearance.

Last month, William Hampton, who was also a guard during the incident, said he saw Mr. Tate on the second tier of the center at about the same time Mr. Breckenridge was being tied up. Mr. Tate was sitting on the floor in front of a cell and advised Mr. Hampton to leave the area, according to testimony he and Mr. Tate gave.

Mr. Hampton also testified, however, that on the first floor of the center he saw Mr. Spain brandish a .38-caliber revolver at him and that he immediately left.

The revolver was never recovered. The only gun found after the incident, according to the prison authorities, was a 9-mm Spanish Astra pistol that Mr. Jackson allegedly used to take over the center. The prison authorities say that a lawyer, Steven Bingham, now a fugitive, smuggled this gun into Mr. Jackson during a visit just before the incident.

However, it was brought out in cross-examination of a guard earlier in the trial that the gun was too large to have fit into the tape recorder Mr. Bingham allegedly used to hide it in.

Louis Tackwood, a former special agent of the Los Angeles Police Department, testified last month that he and two other Los Angeles policemen gave a .38-caliber revolver to a guard at San Quentin three weeks before the incident in violation of prison regulations. Mr. Tackwood said this gun was inoperative and was smuggled into the prison in hopes of inducing Mr. Jackson to try to escape and "set him up to be killed."

Charles Garry, Mr. Spain's attorney, called Mr. Hampton as a witness, even though his testimony placed a gun in his client's hand, in hope of buttressing the defense's conspiracy contention.

Robert Carrow, attorney for Mr. Talamantez, stressed "destruction of evidence" while presenting his client's case. In March a prison guard testified that a truckful of evidence in the case had been buried in a dump two days after the incident. But this month, William Talamantez, chief state investigator in the case, disclaimed responsibility for safeguarding evidence gathered after the incident.

JUST WHAT THE DOCTOR ORDERED

Ever hear of a doctor's convention being held in a men's clothing store? It's easy to get that impression at Rothman's because so many leaders of the medical profession give us their patronage. The reason isn't hard to diagnose. The sweet look of success is no less important to doctors than to the thousands of top business executives who rely on us for their appearance.

Rothman's provides that look with America's finest clothing brands at a fraction of their regular cost. You'll recognize them instantly, even with the labels removed. Special purchases, plus our low mark-up policy, make our discounts the real thing. When, for example, you spot a custom-quality $260 suit that we've marked $155, you'll know it's a custom-quality $260 suit.

Incidentally, doctors . . . and others on call . . . will be glad to know we have a special operator alerted to page you, if necessary, while you're shopping here. Just leave our number (777-7400) with your office or answering service before you come.

In 1976, only about one new car out of every two hundred will be a Mercedes-Benz. For good reason.

The average sticker price is now about $15,000. The factory allocation for America will be fewer than 50,000 automobiles for all of 1976. These are fairly rarefied numbers. But for Mercedes-Benz owners, exclusivity has always been something far more than just a numbers game.

It has more to do with a 90-year heritage of engineering leadership, unstinting craftsmanship, extraordinary performance and technological pioneering; the elements that demonstrate that a Mercedes-Benz is engineered like no other car in the world.

For 1976, the auto industry now forecasts 9.5- or so million new car sales. That means that out of about every 200 new cars you'll see this year, only one will be a Mercedes-Benz. Yet despite all the recent upheavals in the automotive world, perhaps you've observed that most of today's new cars are more characteristic of the same old run than "new ground" Mercedes-Benz offers you ten interesting alternatives.

True, there is no brand-new model this year—but that, itself, is nothing new. For good reason, Mercedes-Benz introduces a new car only when it is a genuinely new car. New in technology, engineering, body design.

touches. Attention to detail no machine can match.

The most copied sedan in the world
Five models share a Mercedes-Benz design that has become the most copied automotive concept in the world. And among that group is the most varied engine choice that any manufacturer can offer you.

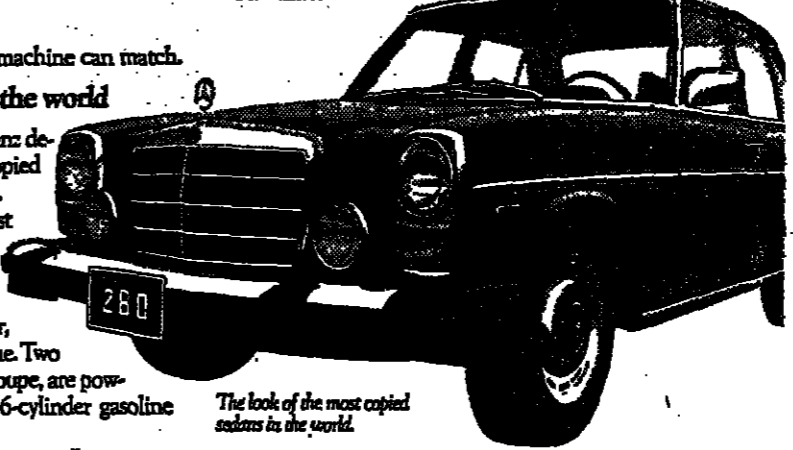

One, the 230 Sedan, is powered by an efficient 4-cylinder, overhead camshaft gasoline engine. Two others, the 280 Sedan and 280 Coupe, are powered by a double-overhead cam 6-cylinder gasoline engine.

That distinction—"gasoline engine"—is necessary with Mercedes-Benz, since the other two models in this group feature Diesel engines. And two different Diesels, at that.

The 240 Diesel's 4-cylinder engine is a tried and true powerplant proved in 103 countries. The 300 Diesel introduced just last year has already made a name in engineering history. It is the world's first 5-cylinder Diesel passenger car. A Diesel so smooth, quiet and responsive that it banishes, once and for all, the image of the Diesel as a workhorse.

Note: At least three domestic manufacturers and two other imports are showing serious interest in the Diesel automobile. Since Mercedes-Benz introduced the first production Diesel car over forty years ago, and has pioneered virtually all of the major refinements in Diesel cars since, we will watch with interest—and some sympathy—the early steps of these worthy competitors. We know the problems that can befall them. And if our experience has taught us one thing, it is this: Before you offer a Diesel passenger car to the world, you'd better know exactly what you're doing.

There is one major difference, however. The 450SE Sedan and its slightly more spacious Touring Car stablemate, the 450SEL, are powered by an engine unique in production car engineering. It's a trim 4.5 liter, overhead camshaft V8 with a breakerless, transistorized ignition system and an all-new, mechanically operated fuel injection system that maintains optimum air/fuel mixture at all times.

The look of the most copied sedans in the world.

MODEL	ENGINE	DISPLACEMENT (cu. in.)	WHEEL BASE (in.)	GVWR (WT. lbs.)	GVW (WT. lbs.)
230 (Sedan)	4 cyl. gas	140.8	108.3	2185	2185
280 (Sedan)	6 cyl. gas	177.8	108.3	3320	3320
280C (Coupe)	6 cyl. gas	177.8	108.3	3320	3320
240D (Sedan)	4 cyl. gas (Diesel Fuel Injection)	148.7	108.3	3210	3210
300D (Sedan)	5 cyl. gas (Diesel Fuel Injection)	183.4	108.3	3210	3210

The third model in the Series, the 280S, presents a subtle advance in 6-cylinder efficiency. Its engine is a sophisticated, double-overhead camshaft six, with transistorized ignition, light alloy cylinder head and hemispherical combustion chambers.

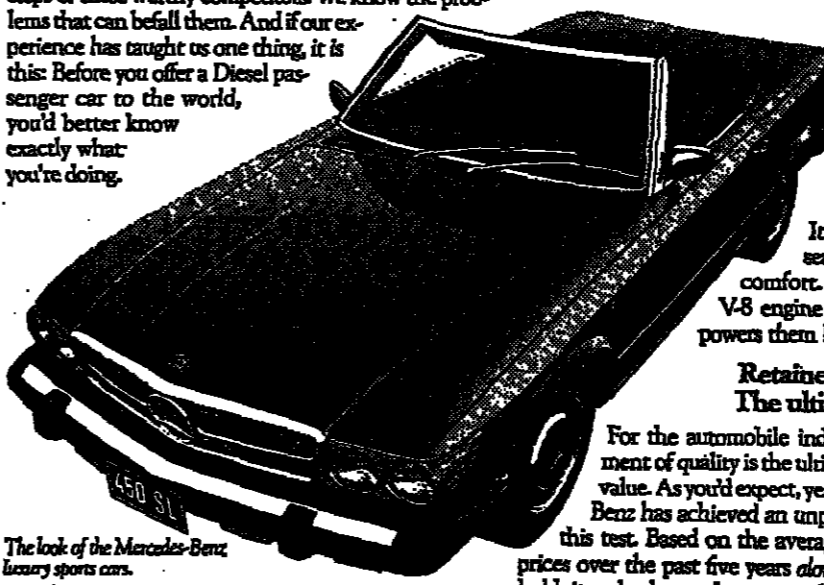

The elegant sporting machines
These are the two most distinctive Mercedes-Benz automobiles in years. Cars too refined to be pure sports cars, yet too responsive not to be.

The 450SEL is the lean, talkative 2-seater that converts from hard-top to an open roadster to a convertible coupe. The 450SLC is one of the world's most exclusive automobiles. It is a sports coupe that seats four in luxurious comfort. The same superb V8 engine in the 450 Sedans powers them both.

Retained Value: The ultimate test

For the automobile industry, one measure of quality is the ultimate test: Retained value. As you'd expect, year by year, Mercedes-Benz has achieved an unparalleled record in this test. Based on the average official used car prices over the past five years alone, Mercedes-Benz holds its value better than any make of luxury car sold in America.

Fewer than 50,000 Americans will be able to own a new Mercedes-Benz in 1976. Only one out of every two hundred new car buyers. Your authorized Mercedes-Benz Dealer can show you why that one should be you. See him. Arrange a test drive. A remarkable driving experience awaits you.

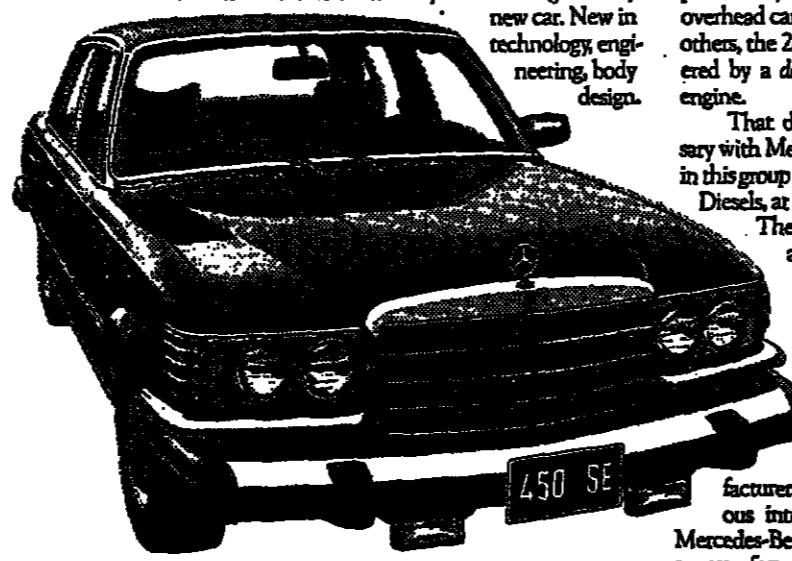

The look of the Mercedes-Benz luxury sports cars.

MODEL	ENGINE	DISPLACEMENT (cu. in.)	WHEEL BASE (in.)	GVWR (WT. lbs.)	GVW (WT. lbs.)
450SEL (Sports)	V-8 gas (Fuel Injection)	275.8	108.3	3795	3795
450SLC (Sports Coupe)	V-8 gas (Fuel Injection)	275.8	111.8	3905	3905

The classic 450 Series Sedans

The world has still never seen their like. They embody the most advanced combination of comfort, all-around performance and safety in Mercedes-Benz history. Three models share the same body design. They are identical in every major luxurious appointment.

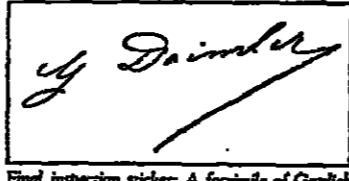

The look of the classic 450 Series Sedans

MODEL	ENGINE	DISPLACEMENT (cu. in.)	WHEEL BASE (in.)	GVWR (WT. lbs.)	GVW (WT. lbs.)
450SE (Sedan)	V-8 gas (Fuel Injection)	275.8	112.8	4165	4165
450SEL (Sedan)	V-8 gas (Fuel Injection)	275.8	116.7	4735	4735
350SE (Sedan)	6 cyl. gas	167.8	112.8	3865	3865

Mercedes-Benz engineers estimate that to do the job right takes them about six years. (Compared to the typical two- to three-year domestic schedules, that is a positively sedate timetable. But then, there are significant differences in the quality and longevity of the results, too.)

In point of fact, every Mercedes-Benz we offer today—regardless of its introduction date—fairly bristles with technological developments so advanced that they are still missing from even the newest of the new cars of 1976.

Final inspection sticker: A facsimile of Gottlieb Daimler's signature is affixed to every new Mercedes-Benz. It means that the car has passed the test of hundreds of individual inspections.

Every model has 4-wheel disc brakes and fully independent suspension. Every one has been refined with a series of improvements. And every one comes to you with a complement of safety, performance and comfort features—as standard equipment—that is almost unheard of these days. Your Dealer will give you the surprising details.

Something else. Every Mercedes-Benz is assembled at an uncommonly slow rate. Time is lavished on hundreds of individual hand operations. Human fidence in the integrity of its governmental institutions, important allegations of agency impropriety and mismanagement require fair and prompt resolution," the panel report said.

"The panel has concluded that many such allegations respecting the performance of the F.D.A. were not answered satisfactorily by the Commissioner's report and consequently must be considered open questions."

The allegations were made in August 1974 by 14 employees, former employees and consultants to the F.D.A. in testimony at hearings before a Senate committee of which Senator Edward M. Kennedy was chairman. Witnesses said that they been criticized, harassed and transferred for opposing approval of new drugs. They charged that the drug agency was improperly influenced by industry.

In a written statement today,
Senator Kennedy, Democrat of Massachusetts, said that the review panel's report was a careful piece of work, but that it would be unsatisfactory to everyone.

He said that it was unsatisfying because, after two years and the spending of more than one-half million dollars, the issues raised in the August hearings had not been resolved, and the situation "leaves a cloud of suspicion still hanging over the F.D.A."

He said that this was not the fault of the panel, but of the task it had been assigned, which, he said, was to investigate an investigation.

proper transfers and removals
of F.D.A. personnel, improper
use of advisory committees, bias of the agency toward drug approval and inappropriate use of the recommendations of the agency's own medical officers.

The panel has not spoken to the larger issues," he said.
"It offers no comment on today's F.D.A. and no positive suggestions on how the F.D.A. can do an even better job."

The panel recommended that several sets of allegations made at the Kennedy hearings be reinvestigated by an independent investigator. These allegations concerned undue industry influence on the agency, improper transfers and removals

of F.D.A. personnel, improper
use of advisory committees,
bias of the agency toward drug
approval and inappropriate use of the recommendations of the
agency's own medical officers.

Chairman Dissents
Dr. Chalmers of Mount Sinai Medical Center was sharply critical of the recommendations as well as of the report.

He accused the panel of approaching the Commissioner's report in a prosecutorial manner and said that the panel's methods of operation led to an undue bias toward drug approval, as some critics of the F.D.A. have charged.

Dr. Chalmers said that other critics of the F.D.A. had complained that the agency tended to go too slowly, rather than too fast, in approving new drugs.

One panel member, in a separate statement published with the report, said that the allegations made at the hearings in 1974 were considered extremely significant and highly damaging to the F.D.A. The panel member, Dr. Norman Weiner, chairman of the department of pharmacology of the University of Colorado Medical Center, said that he shared Dr. Chalmer's skepticism that further study of the allegations would be highly fruitful, but he said that the reinvestigation would be appropriate.

veloped that are useful in low-blood pressure. Studies shown that, in people with mild or moderate high blood pressure, hypertension-related risks can be averted if the drugs are used to bring their blood pressure within a normal range.

For many years, high blood pressure may be accompanied by noticeable symptoms and be detectable only by the familiar test that in-flates an arm cuff around the upper arm.

But with apparent widespread neglect of this major health problem, in 1971 a national study group of heart disease experts called for the establishment of screening programs and neighborhood hypertension centers to detect and treat the many millions of Americans with this disorder.

Using 1973 through 1975 community hypertension evaluation clinic programs were conducted at 1,171 sites in urban, suburban and rural localities in 42 states.

The programs were sponsored by county medical societies, a state association, or both, and sponsored by Ciba Pharmaceutical Company, a major producer of antihypertensive drugs.

Programs were conducted with health professionals, nurses, doctors and pharmacy assistants by community groups.

While those examined in the programs did not represent a national sample for statistical purposes, the findings were remarkably similar to those of other national surveys and can be said to indicate the extent of the nation's hypertension problem, according to the authors of the report.

Inadequate Treatment Of those persons found to have hypertension, nearly 28 percent had never before had been diagnosed and nearly 11 percent knew they were hypertensive but were not being treated for their condition. Another 17 percent were receiving treatment that was not adequate to control their high blood pressure.

High blood pressure was found to be 49 percent more common among blacks, who are less likely than whites to seek medical attention and adequately treated. Severe high blood pressure was found to occur three to four times more often among blacks than among whites. Only 10 percent of black men and 12 percent of black women with hypertension were being adequately treated, the report said, as against 38 percent of white men and 53 percent of white women.

There was also a high rate of undiagnosed, untreated or inadequately treated hypertension among persons under age 40, a group in which high blood pressure is especially likely to be a possible cause of heart disease.

In this age group, only 22 percent of those with hypertension were receiving adequate treatment—16 percent of men and 29 percent of women.

The report, prepared by a panel headed by Dr.
Nathan S. Stanler of Northwest University Medical School in Chicago, states that comparisons with surveys in the 1960's showed that the control of hypertension is now two to four times better.

In 1971, according to the report, there has been a 40 percent increase in the number of physicians by patients with hypertension or hypertension-related disease, and the number of prescriptions written for antihypertensive drugs has risen to 46 million in 1965 to 110 million in 1975.

The authors said that "a sustained program" to control hypertension "is one of the most important things that we have done to safeguard and improve the health of the American people."

*Effective 5/20/76. Note: $3.00 U.S. departure tax not included.

Tell us, and chances are we can make it happen.
If you have a lot of time but not a lot of money, we have Budget Fares. They're about half the price of regular round trip economy fares. And all you have to do is buy your ticket 2 months in advance and spend 22 to 45 days vacationing in Europe.
Which should be easy enough.
If you're not able to plan that far in advance but you still have lots of time, our regular 22/45-Day All-Year Excursion Fares which can be purchased up to the day you leave, can also save you money. As you can see by the chart.
If you only have 2 to 3 weeks, we have our 14/21-Day All-Year Excursion Fares. They're not listed above but they can save you up to 25% off regular round trip economy fares.
Besides low fares, we fly to more cities in Europe than any other U.S. airline. And we're the only U.S. airline that schedules only 747s across the North Atlantic.
On most of our 747s we have an upper-deck dining room for first class passengers. Make your reservation for table dining when you make your airline reservation.

In first class you can choose from 4 entrees.
In economy you can choose from 3 entrees.
And no matter where you sit, you can choose between 2 movies. (Headsets are free in first class. There's a $2.50 charge in economy.)
If you'll want a car while you're in Europe, we can take care of it through Pan Am's World Rent-a-Car.
A hotel room? We have our own Inter-Continental® Hotels all over Europe.
A tour? We have plenty of those.
Guidebooks? We've produced hundreds. On what to pack, what to see, where to eat, where to drink, and where to shop for bargains.
And you'll be able to find a lot of bargains right now in London and Italy because the dollar buys more than ever before.
Your travel agent can tell you more about our fares, tours, and everything else we offer.

One more thing we need to tell you is our Budget Fares apply to departures during June, July and August, 1976. And are subject to government approvals. If you have to cancel or change your Budget Fare reservation before you start your trip (after the trip has begun, no change in reservations is permitted) the most you can lose is 10% or $50, whichever is higher. In limited circumstances you'll get all your money back.
There will be a $15 surcharge on travel to Europe on Friday and Saturday as well as on return travel on Saturday and Sunday.
But remember, in the end, Pan Am Budget Fares buy you 100% of our regular economy in-flight service for about 50% of our economy price.

Rep. Abzug Backed for Senate By New Democratic Coalition

By MARY BREASTED
Representative Bella S. Abzug was endorsed in her bid for the Senate yesterday by the New Democratic Coalition at a meeting of its state delegates that was unusually devoid of controversy.

The delegate vote, which went 72.4 percent for Mrs. Abzug, was so much a foregone conclusion to the 300 or so delegates, campaign workers and "reform" politicians who had assembled for the session in Washington Irving High School that they complained to one another about the lack of suspense.

"I don't know why they're taking so long to count the ballots," said Anthony G. Olivieri, a former Assemblyman, who was dressed in denim. "I think it's a conspiracy to keep us out of the sun."

Representative Abzug, however, gave no evidence of impatience as she waited in the lobby for the official counting, greeting her friends and smiling happily for photographers.

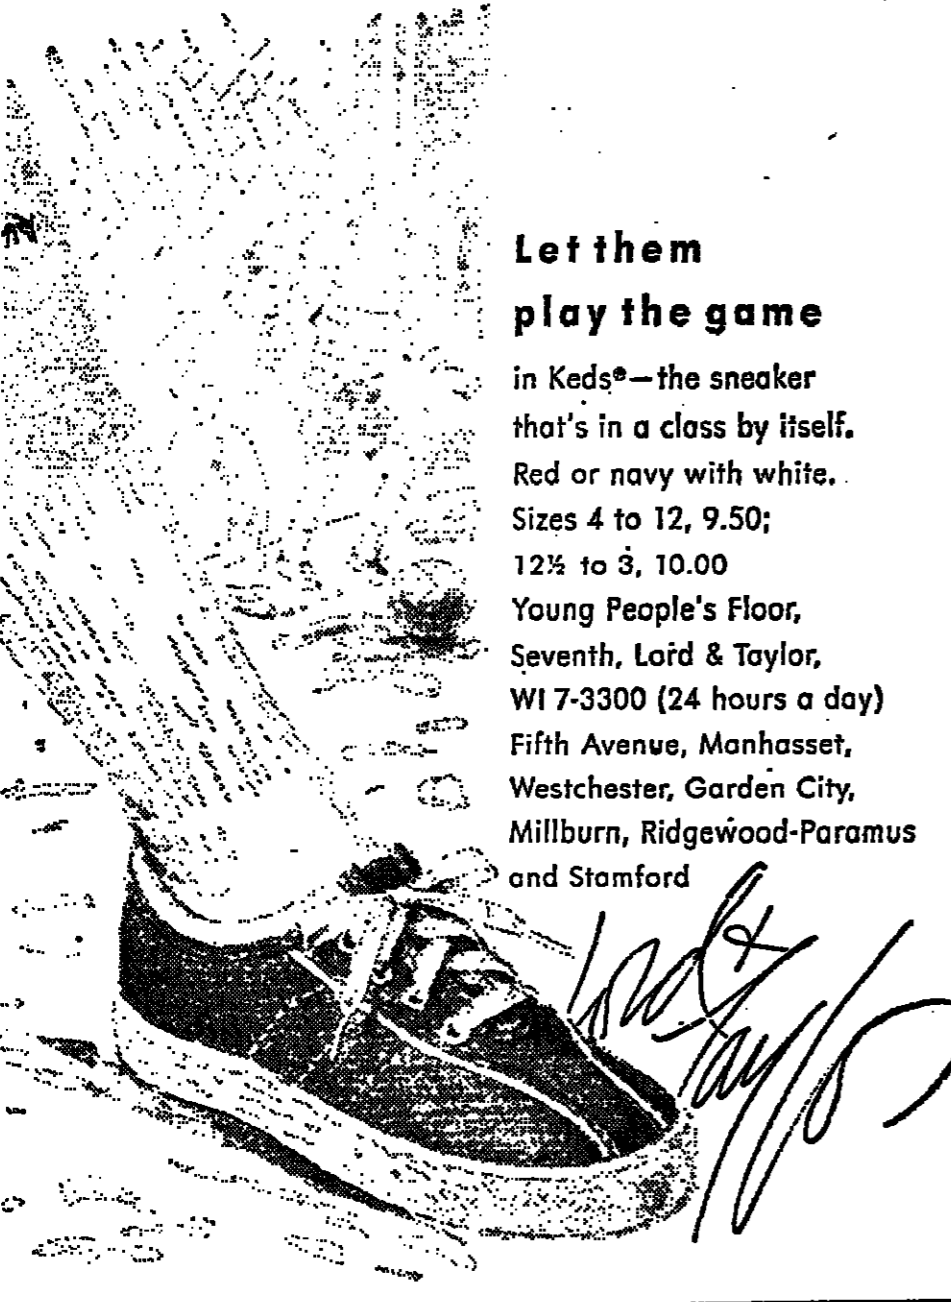

Umbrella Organization
The endorsement of what is considered the umbrella organization of the state's "reform" movement came six days after Mrs. Abzug announced her candidacy for the Democratic nomination for the United States Senate.

The coalition's endorsement gave Representative Abzug a claim for support from a liberal faction in the Democratic Party that is stronger in the New York City area than in other parts of the state.

Ramsey Clark's supporters at the meeting said the group's endorsement would have little significance overall in the Senate race, and they said Mr. Clark did not seek or want the coalition's endorsement.

Rockefeller's Acclaim at Republican Dinner in Queens Shows He Is Still the Life of the Party in New York

ted position of the delegation until now was to give Mr. Rockefeller bargaining leverage for Vice President or possibly Secretary of State.

Republican Presidential primary April 6. In contrast, many of the delegates to the Democratic National Convention were elected over the opposition of the Democratic organization and are thus more independent.

President Rockefeller... Queens Republican dinner... he managed to disrupt it.

Rockefeller was the best thing that happened to the Republican Party in years—he made a minority party a control party," said State Senator John D. Calandra, the Bronx Republican chairman.

Mr. Rockefeller attracted not only votes to the Republican Party but also money. He and his family have contributed heavily to the party and almost completely financed his campaigns, thus relieving the party of that burden. In addition, the Rockefeller family, with their contacts in business and finance, were able to tap other money.

Malcolm Wilson, Mr. Rockefeller's long-time Lieutenant Governor who succeeded him briefly as interim Governor, was discredited by his defeat in the 1974 gubernatorial election.

The state's leading Republican legislator, Warren Anderson, the State Senate majority leader, does not appear inclined to challenge Mr. Rockefeller's leadership. "He doesn't have that fire in his stomach," said a high Republican.

Mr. Rockefeller and spoke to him within hours after the Vice President returned from Europe a week ago. "His control is exaggerated," said Mr. Rosenbaum. "I'm in touch with the situation 18 hours a day and he defers to that—he would rely on my judgment in this area."

However, Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Rosenbaum are now fearful that Mr. Ford is slipping so badly that he needs immediate first aid from the New York delegation or he will not be around to bargain.

The party discipline is evident in a breakdown of the delegation. Among the 154 delegates are 26 county leaders, 66 other party officials and 26 public officials who owe their nominations to the party. To many of these 118 party stalwarts, the party and Nelson Rockefeller are synonymous.

Even a lesser-ranking Republican, Louise Casey of Mohawk, a Republican convention delegate and former president of the Women's Republican Club in Herkimer County, said she owed a debt to Mr. Rockefeller.

The state chairman is probably Mr. Rockefeller's biggest booster and openly urges his nomination for Vice President. Although Mr. Rockefeller has taken himself out of the running, at least temporarily, Suspicions persist, however, among many New York Republicans that one of the reasons for the uncommitted position of the delegation until now was to give Mr. Rockefeller bargaining leverage for Vice President or possibly Secretary of State.

Brown, Dependent on Oregon Write-Ins, Presses Massive Voter-Education Drive

By R. W. APPLE Jr.
Special to The New York Times

PORTLAND, Ore., May 23— "My big job," said Walter McGuire, the 30-year-old manager of Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.'s campaign in Oregon, "is to convince everyone in this state that Jerry's real first name is 'write-in'."

Mr. Brown, the victor in Maryland last Tuesday, is challenging former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, the Democratic front-runner, and Senator Frank Church of neighboring Idaho in this Tuesday's Oregon primary despite the fact that their names are listed on the ballot and his is not.

So Mr. McGuire is running a massive voter-education program, the most intensive campaign of its sort in Presidential politics since Henry Cabot Lodge, then serving as the United States Ambassador to South Vietnam, defeated Nelson A. Rockefeller and Barry Goldwater on write-ins in New Hampshire in 1964.

At the Brown headquarters they answer the phones, "write-in Brown for President." More than 350,000 handbills explaining the write-in process have already been distributed in Portland alone. More than 175,000 pieces of direct-mail advertising on the same subject have been sent to the homes of Democrats in the state's 20 largest counties, and another mailing is on the way.

Mr. Brown's television commercials conclude with a piece of chalk writing the name "Jerry Brown" on a slate. Full-page advertisements will appear tomorrow in Oregon's 10 largest newspapers, showing a ballot with the name written in. And Brown workers will be at most of the state's 2,400 polling places on Tuesday to offer technical explanations.

At one time, the Brown campaign had hoped to hand a pencil to each voter as he arrived at the polling place, but that was construed as a gift to voters and as such was illegal under the strict election laws of this unusually reform-minded state.

Reluctant Clerks

There are other problems, too. A relatively new law makes it illegal for the campaign to provide stickers with the candidate's name printed on them, which would simplify things for Mr. Brown. And some county clerks are showing reluctance to explain the write-in procedure to each voter, as the Brown strategists are pressing them to do.

The ballot themselves pose difficulties. Four different systems are used in the state, including one in which a hole is punched to vote for one of the candidates listed on the ballot but not for write-ins, and another in which the name must be written on the envelope in which the ballot is enclosed, rather than on the ballot.

On some of the ballots, there is only one space for write-ins for all offices, so the voter must not only write Mr.

Playboy Bunnies Missing At Brown's Fund-Raiser

By JON NORDHEIMER
Special to The New York Times

LOS ANGELES, May 23— Flamingos and peacocks and other elegant birds strutted about the grounds of Hugh Hefner's $5 million California estate, but there wasn't a bunny in sight.

It had been decided, spokesmen for Playboy Enterprises advised, that the occasion was not entirely appropriate for a display of Mr. Hefner's costumed corps of sex symbols.

Jerry Brown was dropping by.

Mr. Hefner provided his five-acre hideaway in Holmby Hills yesterday afternoon for an outdoor fund-raiser for the Democratic Presidential hopeful, whose campaign theme is of lowered expectations in a world of dwindling material resources.

Admission was only $25 a head, which is mad money in Mr. Hefner's super-rich suburb, situated between the exquisite shops of Beverly Hills and the gingerbread estates of movie stars in Bel-Air.

The Pinto Crowd

But the people making the contribution were not for the most part, the Rolls-Royce set. It was the Volkswagen and Pinto crowd up from Watts and East Los Angeles, white middle-class dentists, Asian professional workers, black and brown men and women who had escaped from the ghetto and the barrio and now search for a new political community in which to reside.

A thousand people of all attitudes and accents strolled the spongy green lawn of Mr. Hefner's home before the arrival of Mr. Brown, the 38-year-old Governor of California. With a rock band adding to the heat of the sunshine, they admired the wading water birds, the swimming pool, the three tennis courts, and wondered about what fold-out fantasies were locked behind the doors of the imposing stone mansion that rose majestically above the tableau.

Mr. Brown, a former Jesuit seminarian with a publicized distaste for grand houses, he has refused to live in the Governor's mansion in Sacramento—saw no contradiction in this campaign setting when he arrived.

"It's part of the diversity of America," he remarked after stepping out of a plain Plymouth sedan carrying him between campaign stops. He paused for a moment, thin in his gray pinstripe suit, and surveyed the terraced garden and pebbly walkways angling off the shadow side of the English Gothic main house.

"It's just one of the pieces of the very complex mosaic of American life."

Mr. Hefner, who had been playing backgammon earlier at his club-away-from-home, club, jaunty in a blue denim casual suit, asked if he saw any clash of value systems in his support of the ascetic bachelor, he drew on his pipe and said:

"Bigness is better is a notion we all fell victim to in the '60's. We found the same things in our company."

Mr. Hefner's business has recently suffered losses related to overexpansion.

Did his evolving opinion about "bigness is better" also apply to the Playboy Bunny? "It is not necessarily true that less is more," he smiled.

Mr. Brown made his way through the well-dressed crowd and mounted a low platform near the wading pool, where the flamingos walked stiff-legged in the shallow water among sluggish Japanese carp.

Political Super Bowl

"The Democratic nomination is still wide open," he told his cheering supporters. "California is the Super Bowl of this campaign."

BRW-asaack! went one of the flamingos.

The candidate looked over his shoulder at the long-necked hecker. "What constituency does that represent?" Mr. Brown asked, and the audience burst into laughter.

BRW-asaack! Cluck-cluck! the denizens of the wading pool shot back.

"That sounds like my opposition," said the candidate, "being fuzzy on the issues!"

And so went another lazy afternoon in the waning days of the long Presidential primary campaign.

Gains Make Brown 3rd Choice Of Democrats in Gallup Survey

Recent gains by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. of California have made him the third choice among Democratic voters for the Presidential nomination, according to the latest Gallup Poll.

Jimmy Carter, the former Governor of Georgia, remains the first choice among Democrats for the nomination although support for him has leveled off to 35 percent of the voters surveyed, from a high of 39 percent earlier this month. The second choice is Senator Hubert H. Humphrey with 22 percent, despite his announcement that he did not plan to enter any Presidential primaries.

Mr. Brown is now the choice of 14 percent of the Democrats surveyed. He was the choice of 6 percent earlier this month. However, the survey showed that if a showdown race were held now, Mr. Carter would receive 57 percent of the vote to Mr. Brown's 35 percent, with 8 percent undecided.

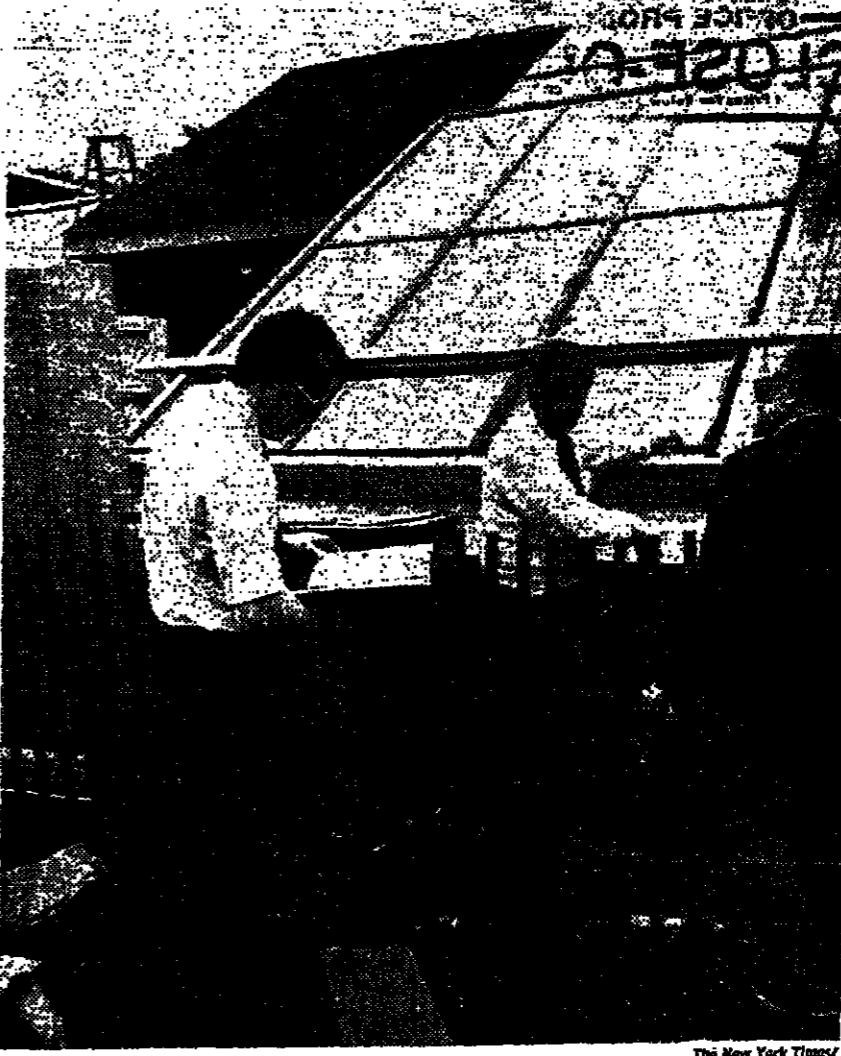

But the poll showed that Senator Humphrey would beat Mr. Carter in a showdown, receiving 49 percent of the vote to Mr. Carter's 45 percent, with 6 percent undecided.

The following question was asked of Democrats nationwide: "Suppose the choice for President in the Democratic convention this year narrows down to Jimmy Carter and Hubert Humphrey (Jimmy Carter and Edmund Brown). Which one would you prefer to have the Democratic convention select?"

The results are based on the responses of 462 Democrats out of a total sample of 1,068 adults, aged 18 and older, and interviewed during the period May 21-23.

Liberal Group Still for Udall

WASHINGTON, May 23 (UPI)—American Democrats today unanimously affirmed its March 20 endorsement of Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona for the Democratic Presidential nomination. Meeting in convention, the liberal group, which heard a banquet speech from Mr. Udall last night, adopted a new resolution praising Mr. Udall's legislative record and his "commitment to the principles of democracy and social justice upon which this organization was established."

Exhibit on Solar Energy Set in Ca

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON, May 23— Americans who visit the capital this summer for the Bicentennial will have a chance to see a free outdoor exhibition of the energy source that may become the workhorse of the American economy in the third century of independence—sunshine.

A Government-industry solar energy exhibit will open on the Mall Wednesday and be open every day from 9:30 A.M. to 9 P.M. through Oct. 31. The site is between Third and Fourth Streets and Jefferson and Independence Avenues.

The exhibit illustrates that sunshine is the primal source of the earth's energy and also a source that could replace the earth's dwindling supplies of fossil fuels, which are a form of stored sun energy.

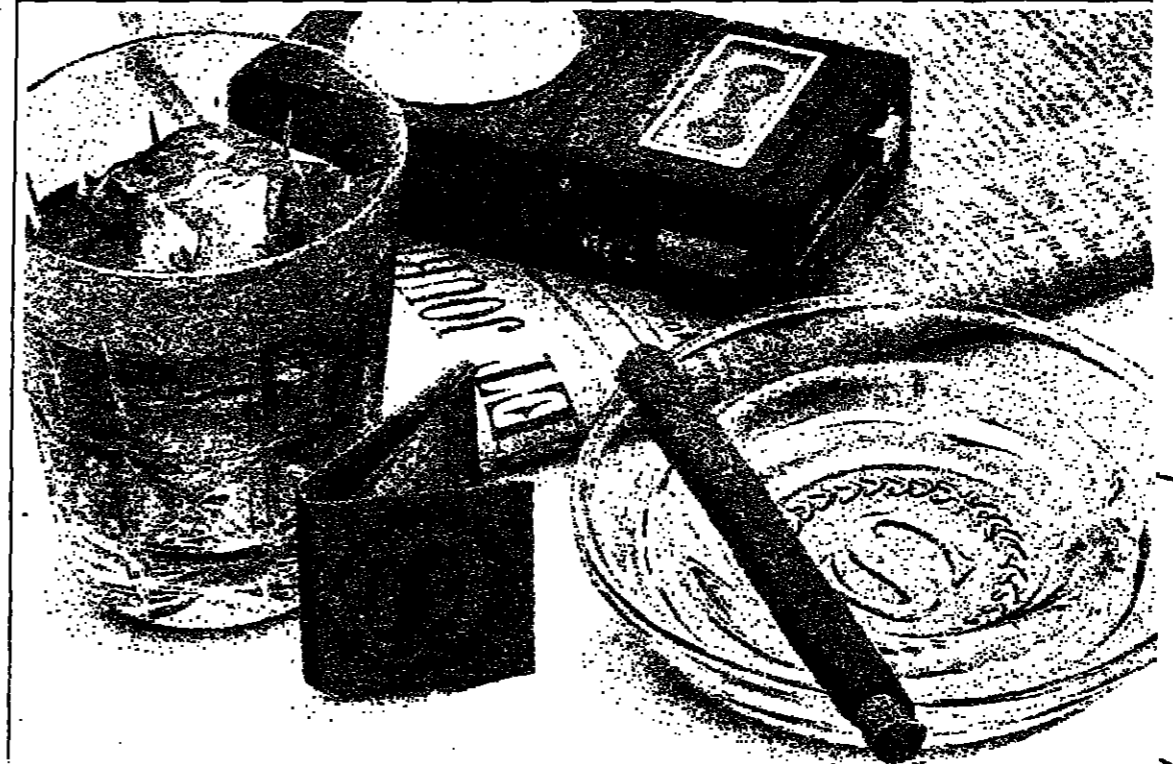

There is, for example, the Darrieus vertical-axis wind generator. It looks like a six-foot, three-blade egg beater. In fact, it is a model of a windmill. This model, named after its 19th-century French designer, illustrates how wind can turn a turbine generator to make electricity.

Making electricity, heating, indoor space and heating water are the principal uses of solar energy illustrated at the exhibit. Space heating is the application closest in time to general commercial use. Hundreds of houses and schools in the United States now have solar heat panels in their roofs.

Economics and public acceptance are the main obstacles to widespread use of solar energy, according to manufacturers and analysts. Costs are high, partly because the technology needs refinement—for example, photovoltaic grids to convert sunshine directly to energy—partly because the industry is in its infancy and has not realized the economies of large scale production.

The Government is trying to help business to solve the problem by engineering and broadening public awareness of solar energy.

The Energy Research and Development Administration, which is contributing $200,000 of a Federal total of $350,000 for the exhibit, hopes that the show will answer critics who charge that the agency is biased in favor of "big-comp" energy, chiefly nuclear en-

Udall, Taking a 'Calculated Risk,' Is Stumping for Votes in Carter Country

By LINDA CHARLTON
Special to The New York Times

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 23—For the last three days, Representative Morris K. Udall has been neglecting such delegate-rich states as Ohio and New Jersey to campaign here and in two other Southern states he knows he cannot do well in, making a shabby, ad hoc effort in pursuit of what even he calls a "calculated risk."

Mr. Udall was in this state all day yesterday, flew home to Washington to fulfill a speaking engagement, and returned here today. On Friday, he divided his day between Little Rock, Ark., and Nashville—the latter in a state, Tennessee, that he had not planned to campaign in until Thursday.

His self-styled calculated risk is based on the premise that underlies all his plans for campaigning right through to the end of the primary season on June 8: that former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia, his momentum slowed now, will not be able to win a first-ballot nomination at the national convention in July.

"A National Campaign"

"When that day comes," Mr. Udall said Friday in explaining his strategy, "I want to be able to say that I ran a national campaign, that I have gone into half the states, that I have campaigned in the South and in the border states."

Mr. Udall discounted reports that Senator Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts might agree to run, saying: "I talked to him two days ago and I didn't see any change in his position."

Mr. Udall also discounted Senator Hubert H. Humphrey, without denying that the Minnesota Democrat has "broad support and is widely beloved." He said Mr. Humphrey "drastically cut his chances" of being drafted for the nomination by "pulling out of the New Jersey contest."

"My strategy is to grab, steal, borrow, beg, carry away every single delegate I can get between now and the 12th of July to be in a strong bargaining position," Mr. Udall said.

In Little Rock, where he was endorsed by William Becker, president of the state American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, Mr. Udall said: "If we get a single delegate, if we do better than George Wallace, we will have exceeded the polls."

In Tennessee, Mr. Udall appeared at a dinner forum sponsored by The Nashville Tennessean, at which both he and President Ford's Republican challenger, Ronald Reagan, were on the platform. It was the opportunity to give a short speech and answer questions from the audience at this event that was largely responsible for his last-minute decision to go into Tennessee, Mr. Udall said.

"Old Second-Place Mo"

The Arizona Democrat, obviously heartened by his close race with Mr. Carter in Michigan last week, now refers to himself jokingly as "Old Second-Place Mo," and tells audiences that being second has an honorable history. "Even George Washington married a widow," he says.

Mr. Udall was also relieved and encouraged by the release Friday of $312,000 in Federal matching funds. Almost all of this will go to meet the campaign's debt, but it will make further credit—and therefore campaigning—possible. He expects $127,000 more in matching money soon.

Even so, he is still campaigning on a budget. In Kentucky yesterday, a day of gentle breezes and a brilliant sunshine, Mr. Udall spent practically all day sitting in groves of plastic greenery, artificially lit and air-conditioned. As he did in Michigan, he is exploiting the potential of free television and radio time with interviews after interview, using even the last few minutes at the Louisville airport for telephone radio interviews.

State Senator John Lackey, a Udall supporter, said he believed Mr. Udall might win at least two and at most seven of Kentucky's 46 delegates Tuesday. Even the mavericks of the Democratic Party, he said, are supporting Mr. Carter.

He is well aware that his long-range plan for victory arouses considerable skepticism. He has, he said cheerfully, "the best collection of political obituaries" around. And it was noted with general laughter that the driver of the bus that carried Mr. Udall, his Secret Service entourage and reporters around Kentucky yesterday was named J.P. Fluke.

Tommy Mastin, aged 6, spends half his time with father, left, and half with mother, right, under joint custody arrangements.

Joint Custody: Is Sharing the Child a Dangerous Idea?

By GEORGIA DULLEA

Six-year-old Tommy Mastin, the central figure in a controversial child-rearing arrangement known as joint custody, leads something of a double life in Gainesville, Fla.

On Mondays, Wednesdays and Sundays, Tommy lives with his father at Oak Forest, a luxury apartment complex on the city's south side. There are tennis courts there, swimming pools and bicycle paths.

On Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, the boy lives with his mother in the older north-side neighborhood of 26th Street. Here Tommy's home is a Cape Cod, surrounded by hills for sliding, tall trees for climbing and a duck pond.

Friday's very depending on his plans and those of his divorced parents. One of the constants in Tommy's life, however, is his first grade class at Williams Elementary School.

The Mastin case is a striking example of joint custody, also called split, shared or divided custody. In more typical situations, children do not move about as often as Tommy, although some spend half their time with each parent. Others live mostly with one parent and visit the other parent, like children in traditional arrangements.

Both Have Responsibility

But what distinguishes joint custody from traditional arrangements, and what concerns professionals involved in family law, is that both parents theoretically have equal authority and responsibility when it comes to raising the child.

"It's asking a lot to expect two people who could not get along in marriage to suddenly share decision-making for a child's educational, religious and everyday activities," said Harry M. Fain, a Beverly Hills lawyer.

Mr. Fain was among a group of lawyers, judges, child-care specialists and parents, who weighed the advantages and disadvantages of joint custody in recent talks around the country.

In general, they agreed that the concept, while much discussed in legal circles, was not a customary one and thus had no clear meaning in court. Lawyers spoke of spelling out joint custody terms in excruciating detail and are still finding judges reluctant to consider the arrangement.

This reluctance stems from the notion, supported by psychiatric evidence, that a child needs the security and stability of, first, one primary residence—"his teddy bear, not any old bear," as one child psychiatrist put it—and, second, one custodial parent to make the major decisions on his upbringing.

Mocking Solomon

No one took issue with the trend toward giving the noncustodial parent a broader role by liberalizing visitation rights, say, or by requiring consultation on such matters as religious training and choice of schools. But to award each parent equal custody is, in the minds of many professionals interviewed, to mock Solomon by cutting the child down the middle.

"From the standpoint of the child, the situation is one of divided authority or what's called the double bind—it's a dangerous situation for a child," said Henry Foster, a professor of law at New York University and chairman-elect of the American Bar Association's family law section.

Citing a recent series of joint-custody awards in New York, Professor Foster characterized them as "something of a copout" to avoid thorny placement problems and charges of alleged sex discrimination.

In Separation Agreements

"Mind you, I'm not saying never think in terms of joint custody," he stressed. "There may be situations where it's justified. But it does lend itself to an abuse and the equality of authority may be more of a token than a reality. Somebody's got to get in the driver's seat."

Despite such warnings, voiced over and over, a small but growing number of parents are nevertheless seeking—and sometimes gaining—joint custody. How are they doing it?

According to Stanley F. Kaplan, chairman of the Bar Association's custody committee, the vast majority of joint custodys, perhaps 95 percent, are written into the separation agreements that survive the divorce decrees.

But there are no available figures on these custodys, Mr. Kaplan, a Chicago lawyer, said, nor on the smaller percentage decided in court because, "right now, it's just too new."

Besides being a new idea, joint custody may also be just a paper pact, as Professor Foster and others suggested, a balm for the guilt that parents, especially mothers, feel when pressured by society to fight for a custody they are unable or unwilling to assume.

Several lawyers, including Brenda Feigen Fasteau, who practices in Manhattan, recalled handling such cases. "Sometimes," Mrs. Feigen Fasteau said, "the term 'joint custody' is a cover for a man having real custody and a woman not wanting to lose face by giving up custody."

Other times joint custody may be a father's compromise. For example, Allen, a 35-year-old Los Angeles accountant, said, "I'm fighting for joint custody because I don't approve of my ex-wife's swinging lifestyle."

"To get complete custody," he said, "I would have to prove her an unfit mother, to bring up her drinking and drug problem in court, which would destroy her in the eyes of the children."

6 Months a Year

Instead, Allen is seeking custody of the children for six months of the year. Since their mother lives nearby, he hopes to be able to see them regularly during her custody period.

"Without daily contact with me, I'm certain my children would grow up hating my values," Allen said. "The physical arrangements of moving back and forth will be difficult for them, but I feel the psychological advantages far outweigh the disadvantages."

Parents who live with joint custody tend to agree. True, their children sometimes have two sets of clothes, toys, friends, even pets, they say, but their children also know that they have two caring parents.

"We're a lot happier this way," said Mary Kay Barbieri, whose children, aged 6 and 7, picked six months with each parent as their "second choice." Their first choice, of course, was "that we all be together."

Couldn't Cope Alone

Both she and her former husband, John Keegan, are lawyers. They live in the same Seattle neighborhood so the children can walk to school from either home.

"This way neither of us loses contact with the everyday stuff," the mother went on. "We both know who their best friends are, when they're in a school play and how they're doing in math."

The father nodded. "I didn't want a relationship where I could only see the kids on some holidays and weekends," he said firmly.

This couple, like many, pointed out that neither of them could have coped with the demands of parenthood and a career as sole custodian of the children.

In Gainesville, Thomas Mastin, brother of a wine and cheese shop, spoke of the logistics of joint custody being "harder than if two working parents were living together" and "getting more attention than his care, cautioned, however, arrangement might not be every couple."

"You have to be intelligent enough to handle it," said an assistant state attorney. "Tom and I are not out of other over. We talk just day. Not many people can. Even children in the same Morton Weiss, a child psychiatrist in suburban Detroit, with strictures on joint custody, in case of three children who moved in with their father."

The father sounded like a model. He owned his own business, arranged his hours to be with the children after school. He prepared breakfast, lunch and dinner for the children, and did their laundry, played Monopoly.

Somewhat, it didn't work. The children, a boy of 12, and a girl of 10, were happy enough, Dr. Weiss said. The little 6-year-old is unhappy, misses his mommy.

"But sometimes joint custody can be remarkably well. In a case, Family Law Reporter, a couple the children to live in one home while the husband and wife ran so smoothly that they married."

Many-Named Lamp Is Casting Its Spell On Many Designers

By VIRGINIA LEE WARREN

It's called the tent. Or the triangle. Sometimes it's the V, sometimes the wide V. Whatever it's called, it's a sturdy but delicate looking floor lamp that is especially good for reading.

And it evidently has become the darling of interior designers. Seven of the 11 who decorated rooms recently in an empty Stanford White mansion at 973 Fifth Avenue for one of those charity tours—this time for Kips Bay Boys Club—used the tent and five of the seven used more than one.

Altogether there were 15 of the lamps in seven rooms, a fact that was not lost on the hundreds of people who tramped through the mansion.

"One in four asked about them and one in five asked the price, Noel Jeffrey, one of the interior designers, said after the tours were over. He used three in the room he decorated.

Harry Lee Hinson, who used two, said, "Table-side floor lamps are very much in vogue and these are perfect examples." The lamps are frequently all brass or all chrome or a combination.

Both Mr. Jeffrey and Mr. Hinson used the original tent, the ones designed by Cedric Hartman, an Omaha architect, to be sold only through decorators. In New York Mr. Hartman's lamps are only at Lutten-Clary-Stern Inc. (1039 Third Avenue) and the price is at least $300. Naturally, there are many copies for much less.

The lamp is not new. Mr. Hartman designed the first one about 10 years ago and he says it was first taken up by Philip Johnson, the architect, and by Billy Baldwin, the interior designer. Gradually others became interested and something like a spurt, on the part of clients, began a couple of years ago.

Small Numbers

The copies have not hurt the true Hartmans, which have always been made in such small numbers—there is no assembly line—that the problem has been in meeting the demand. Some of the decorators brought their own tents from their homes for the Fifth Avenue mansion because they had sold all they had in their showrooms.

Perhaps the price of the lamp comes from the fact that has copied the tent—Tom Lowy of Koch & Lowy. "The Hartman lamps are as beautiful as jewels," he said. "You can't see the seams because they're mostly made by hand; and the glow of the brass, the way it's been polished—no machine could produce that kind of workmanship."

Mr. Lowy said he didn't realize he was copying Cedric Hartman. "I'd bought a tent in Italy," he said, "but it had been made so badly that I decided to make a better one. I didn't know that the Italian one wasn't original; I didn't know it was a copy of Hartman's design."

A good many interior designers seem to think Mr. Lowy's lamp is a good version of the Hartman. Ellen McCluskey used it in the Fifth Avenue mansion; so did Richard Ohrbach and Lynn Jacobson.

A tent by Mr. Lowy is also in W. & J. Sloane for $119. There are versions of the tent in retail stores from a number of other companies. The prices vary from $55 at Abraham & Straus, Gimbel's and Bloomingdale's to $75 at B. Altman and $85 at Lord & Taylor. The workmanship, weight of the metal and styling vary about as much as the price. And not one of the copies has the distinctive Hartman base—either a single bar or two bars at right angles. The bases of the copies are round.

All the tents, whether originals or copies, may be had in chrome as well as brass. Cedric Hartman's first ones had shades, arms and bases of brass with stems of stainless steel. It was one of these that the Museum of Modern Art chose for its design collection.

No matter what the metal, the shades tend to heat up unless bulbs with fairly low wattage are used. Most people think 40 should be sufficient since the rays are focused directly on the reading material. "The lamps weren't meant to be used as a main source of light," he said. "They shouldn't be intrusive; we never intended for them to be focal."

The interior designers understand this. "One of the most wonderful things about them," said Michael La Rocca, "is that when you put them in a room they seem to disappear."

How Mother of Vinegar Died of the I

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We have noted many times over the years that thoughts about food go in cycles. To cite a recent indication are two letters from readers asking for information about what is known as "mother" of vinegar.

Katherine Smith of Manhattan states that she "recently ran across an article in a vintage magazine describing your kitchen on Long Island and I was most interested in your mention of a crock containing mother of vinegar."

She added that she had wanted for some time to experiment with wines for making vinegar.

And David Rados of Tenafly, N. J., writes: "I would welcome a future column on vinegar. My books say nothing on the subject. What is 'mother,' where do you get it, how do you use it and where do you get information on it?"

As good a source as any is "Larousse Gastronomique" (Crown, 1961), which points out that vinegar is the result of acetic fermentation of wine. This fermentation is caused by a fungus known as mycodermis aceti, which, when added to wine, is apparent in the form of a thick, gelatinlike skin that occurs on the surface of the wine in a crock, cask or whatever.

In French, this is known as mere de vinaigre and in English, mother of vinegar. The growth of the fungus and transformation of wine into vinegar is best cultivated at temperatures ranging from 59 to 86 degrees Fahrenheit.

The mother, incidentally, can, indeed must, be divided and discarded or transferred to another batch of wine as it expands, otherwise it will fill the crock or cask.

"A good vinegar," Larousse continues, "must be clear and transparent, colorless if it is made from white wine, pinkish if it comes from red wine, but always lighter colored than the latter; it must have a frankly acid taste, and an aroma recalling that of the wine from which it comes."

We came across the mother mentioned by Mrs. Smith several years ago and quite by accident. It started as a film that developed in a bottle of ordinary commercial vinegar purchased in a supermarket. We transferred the batch to an enamel crock with a spigot and commenced adding wine. The mother prospered and we were shortly producing enough homemade vinegar for our own purposes and those of our friends.

And then one summer, during one of our extended absences from home, the mother was neglected and subjected to intense heat. It died.

It has recently been reported in a column here that a vinegar cask complete with mother may be ordered from the Franjo Cellars, P.O. Box 7462, Stockton, Calif. 95207, for $39.95 postpaid. There is also a toll free number, 800-344-3221, and the purchase can be charged to Master Charge. The cask is also available in Bloomingdale's sixth-floor housewares department for $42.

Speaking of cycles, we have recently for some unfathomable reason been asked to name the one most popular recipe ever printed in the food news columns of The New York Times. We can name it without a second thought.

It is a recipe given to us more than 10 years ago by a marvelous amateur cook in Honolulu. We will remember the Sunday morning when we first sampled the dish. It was shortly before noon on a sun-drenched terrace overlooking Waikiki Beach, and the festivities began with a well-iced bloody Mary, followed by drippingly sweet papaya slices and then a pancake the likes of which we had never sampled better.

That was David Eyre's pancake, which was served with chilled champagne. We must have received hundreds of requests for reprints of the pancake recipe and this is it.

Cheryl Fuss Wed to K. R. Kleefeld

Cheryl Gaye Fuss, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Abraham B. Fuss of Hallandale, Fla., was married yesterday evening to Kenneth Robert Kleefeld, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Kleefeld, of New York.

Mr. Kleefeld, an alumnus of the High School of Music and Art, received bachelor's and Ph.D. degrees in economics from the University of Wisconsin. He also studied at the University of Essex in Colchester, England, and completed his doctorate under a Ford Foundation fellowship.

Teacher Weds Miss De Paoli

Deborah Jeanne De Paoli, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael De Paoli of Brookfield, Conn., was married yesterday afternoon to Daniel Francis Verdery, son of the Rev. Dr. John D. Verdery, headmaster of the Wooster School in Danbury, Conn., and Mrs. Verdery.

Diana Roberts Married in Capital

Diana Byron Roberts and Thomas Price McCarley, both of Washington, were married there yesterday afternoon in Grace Episcopal Church, Georgetown, by the Rev. Jo Cowin Tartt Jr.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. George French Roberts of New York and the late Mr. Roberts of Milton, Mass., who was in charge of mortgages and real estate for the John Hancock Life Insurance Company of Boston.

Martha Gorowitz Wed to R. Scot Perlin

Martha L. Gorowitz, a cash-compensation officer in the human resources department of the Chase Manhattan Bank N.A., was married at noon yesterday to R. Scot Perlin.

He is with the Australia/New Zealand/South Pacific desk in the Asia division of the Bankers Trust Company. Rabbi Harvey Tattelman of Temple Shaaray Tefila performed the ceremony in the Terrace Room of the Plaza.

Patricia A. Mendell Bride of R. C. Singer

Patricia Anne Mendell, a pediatric social worker at St. Vincent's Medical Center of Richmond on Staten Island, was married yesterday afternoon to Richard Clark Singer, a New York lawyer.

The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Gorowitz of Forest Hills, Queens. Her father is an economist and business development consultant with the Opportunity Development Association of Brooklyn.

Dr. George Lowe Weds Miss Judge

In Temple Shaaray Shomoyim in Lancaster, Pa., yesterday afternoon, Elizabeth Scott Judge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Scott Judge of Arlington, Mass., became the bride of Dr. George Lowe.

The bride, a graduate of University Heights College of New York University, received a master's degree in industrial and labor relations from the New York State School of Industrial Relations at Cornell University.

Miss Diserio Bride Of T. S. Alexander

Eugenie A. Diserio and T. Steven Alexander, painters and students studying for Master of Fine Arts degrees at Columbia University, were married yesterday afternoon in Waveney House, a former New Canaan, Conn., private estate now owned by the town.

The Rev. John Scully of New York performed the ceremony. He was assisted by the Rev. Leo J. Daly, both are Roman Catholic priests.

Susan Nora Goldberg, daughter of Samuel Goldberg of Lebanon, Pa., and the late Rose Goldberg, was married yesterday to Fred Taylor Isquith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Isquith of New York.

Rabbi Melvin Keifer performed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Goldberg in Westbury, L. I., the bride's uncle and aunt.

Bridge: Brazilian Upset

Special to The New York Times: MONTE CARLO, Monaco, May 23—The dramatic finale to the world championships here yesterday, when six jubilant Brazilians edged past the defending Italian champions to take the title, demonstrates several important truths.

One is that the Italians, with different partnerships and new players, are no longer the invincible force they used to be. Within the space of three weeks they have lost two world titles, more than they had lost in the previous 20 years.

A second is that the United States teams, which could finish only seventh in the open series, three and a half matches behind the winners, and third in the women's championship, are not effective in big multinational contests in which it is just as important to blitz weak opponents as to defeat strong ones.

The American team won the Bermuda Bowl earlier in the month, defeating Italy, but could never mount a serious challenge for the Olympic title.

A third is that countries such as Brazil, from outside the traditional centers of supremacy in Europe and North America, can produce teams of world championship-winning ability. This is the first victory of such a team, but will surely not be the last.

A fourth is that justice was done. If Italy had won by a narrow margin over Brazil, the Brazilians would never have been able to forget their nonmatch against the world champions.

When the two teams met in the 10th of the 45 rounds, it appeared that the world champions had been decimated. A likely result seemed Brazil 20, Italy minus two. However, it then appeared, thanks to a major error by a tournament director, that the players were wrongly seated in one room.

East was in triumph when a low heart would be better. The dummy, and an led East ruffed and South gave spade. East played h and South ruff and discarded a last club to n doubled contract. In the replay, two diamonds at one. Unfortunate clarer was anot

Democratic Alternative

Political parties have habitually in the past put together their platforms in the week leading up to the national convention, hearing witnesses and haggling over language, while half-distracted by the fight for the Presidential nomination.

Of late, the parties have tried to make this process more rational by starting it earlier. This year the Democratic National Committee has for several weeks been holding regional hearings to receive platform testimony. The objective is to have a draft of the party program written and sent to delegates for their consideration before the convention opens on July 12 in Madison Square Garden.

At the final hearings in Washington last week, Representative Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the House majority leader, presented to the platform committee a comprehensive legislative program on behalf of his fellow Democrats in the House of Representatives. With a little editing, it could readily serve as the Democrats' platform on domestic issues.

It is highly unlikely that either the party platform committee or a new President would accept the House leadership proposals in their entirety but, representing as they do the consensus of what Democratic members of each House legislative committee think can feasibly be enacted in their respective jurisdictions, these recommendations provide a realistic and informed basis for action.

The House Democrats assign highest importance to policies of economic stimulus, including a million public-service jobs and a possible further income tax cut to achieve a reduction of unemployment to 3 percent by 1981. Among their other major proposals are tax reform, a welfare system with uniform national standards, a comprehensive national health insurance plan, renewed emphasis on housing construction and rehabilitation of existing houses, energy conservation, more financial aid for higher education, and a balanced transportation system with a larger share for railroads and urban mass transit.

Three appendices attached to the basic, 124-page document set forth an indictment of the "incompetent, corrupt and wasteful" record of the Nixon and Ford Administrations and provide a detailed review of the vetoes and impoundments of the last eight years. There have been no fewer than 86 vetoes of Democratic measures.

That review of the antagonism between Republican Presidents and the Democratic Congress sustains the intellectual motif of this document: The country is weary of conflict and stalemate. Repeatedly, the authors use the phrase "in the spirit of consensus, not veto confrontation."

Regardless of the identity of the Democratic Presidential nominee, he is likely to agree with the objectives and many of the specific proposals of his party in the House of Representatives. Congress is a far distance from accepting the strict party discipline and accountability of British parliamentary government, but the members of the majority party in the House have made clear the Democratic alternative in this election year.

Protecting Privacy

The House Judiciary Committee will begin consideration tomorrow of a measure called "Bill of Rights Procedures Act," which is designed to limit and regulate governmental and commercial intrusions into the commonplace transactions of modern American life. It aims at protecting privacy with respect to bank, telephone and credit records, mail covers, telephone service monitoring and nonverbal communications.

Perhaps the most significant aspect of the legislation deals with the confidentiality of records on activities which are essential to participation in society, such as those kept by financial institutions, credit card issuers and telephone companies. Although some states already have laws protecting such information, there are currently no Federal laws in this vital area of customers' rights. Moreover, the Supreme Court recently ruled that compliance with a Federal subpoena by a bank—even in the absence of intervention by the customer or notification to him—was not an invasion of a constitutionally protected right of privacy.

The proposal before the Judiciary Committee would require Federal agents to obtain the individual's written consent to allow opening up his records, or to serve a subpoena which the citizen could challenge, or to obtain a court-authorized search warrant. Under the proposed law, the institution would have to keep an account of all examinations of a customer's records. Whenever a subpoena was served on either, the institution and the customer would be notified of their rights.

Mail covers consist of the inspection of pieces of first-class mail and the collection of whatever information appears on the outside of the envelopes. This investigative technique was widely abused in the course of the F.B.I.'s Cointel program. The bill would limit the circumstances in which such covers could be conducted to investigations of a felony offense or postal fraud and to the search for fugitives. It would require written authorization in all cases, and a sworn affidavit in some, thus clearly holding a specific official responsible for initiating an investigation.

The wiretap section of the bill would require that warnings be given by telephone companies to those who may be overheard when telephone communications are monitored to determine the quality of service. It would also extend the requirement of court orders for the interception of telephone conversations to the interception of aural communications, such as telegraph and telex and other nonverbal messages.

As computer and communications technology becomes ever more sophisticated and delves deeper into private lives, there is a growing need for legislative and judicial ingenuity to protect the privacy of even the most mundane human activities. The current proposal is a sound attempt to provide the necessary new safeguards.

Slow Road to Parity

Departing from the prepared text of his address to a conference last Friday on "A National Policy for Urban America," Governor Carey promised to support the move toward parity in the funding of the city and state universities. That pledge goes beyond the goal of "equity" contained in the Governor's statement concerning the City University's future issued on the previous day.

The demand by the Board of Higher Education for true parity in state funding of CUNY arises naturally from the Governor's demand for full parity in the tuition charged by the state and city systems. The inequity in Albany's present proposals, which in fact amount to an ultimatum to the board, is in the matter of timing: parity in tuition, at an annual level of $750 for freshmen and sophomores and $900 for the two upper years, is to be achieved instantly in September; parity in the state's pre-student expenditures is to be phased in slowly, on a timetable yet to be determined.

In the meantime, CUNY is, as the Governor's report accurately put it, "on the brink of academic and fiscal collapse." The reason for this condition is that, in the course of the current academic year, the university's original $549 million state-certified budget has been slashed by $151.5 million, or 28 percent. Recognizing the seriousness of these cuts, Mr. Carey last week moved to avert the imminent threat of disaster by proposing to advance $24 million to allow the university to meet its present obligations.

But unless the state reconsiders the pace at which it moves toward parity in return for the surrender of free tuition, CUNY's rescue remains in doubt. If that rescue falters, the cost will have to be measured, not in terms of tuition statistics, but of opportunities closed to young people who will no longer appear on the statistics at all.

A Chance for Justice

In the final days of the session in Albany, the legislators might well recall the words of one of the great pioneers of legal change, the late Chief Justice Arthur T. Vanderbilt of New Jersey: "Judicial reform is no sport for the shortwinded or for lawyers who are afraid of temporary defeat."

There is now an opportunity for sweeping reform of the entire judicial system in New York such as has not existed literally for decades. It is nothing less than a chance to vote on an entirely new Article VI in the State Constitution—the judiciary article. Governor Carey's all-inclusive package, following statewide hearings and the proposals of his Task Force on Judicial Selection and Court Reform, would permit New York to catch up with half the states in the nation that have restructured their judicial systems along modern lines.

The new article would change the method of judicial selection into a "check and double-check" system, modeled after what is known as the Missouri plan. Instead of political judicial conventions, followed by a popular vote for largely unfamiliar names with party labels, a merit selection method would be established. A non-partisan screening panel of lawyers and laymen would propose highly qualified potential jurists for gubernatorial appointment, subject to Senate confirmation. After two years in office, the judge would face the voters with a known record in a "retention election," and, if approved, could remain on the bench for a full term.

The many different courts in New York—Claims, Surrogate, Family, County, Civil, Criminal—would be unified into a statewide trial court having Supreme Court rank. This would mean less floating from one jurisdiction to another, permit judicial manpower to be more fully used, and immediately upgrade the stature and authority of the lower courts.

Other major reforms in the judiciary article would give the state the constitutional responsibility for financing the unified system, leading to less-starved courts and better administrative procedures; and create an improved method of judicial discipline.

What gives the new article special urgency at this time is that a constitutional amendment has to be approved by two separately elected Legislatures before being submitted to public referendum. Failure to pass the court reform article now will mean there can be no such reform until at least 1979.

Unhealthy Charade

The self-righteous farce which Arab governments and their third-world allies are imposing upon international specialized agencies reached a new pinnacle of hypocrisy at the Geneva assembly of the World Health Organization.

Three public health experts from Rumania, Indonesia and Senegal returned from their separate inspection tours of the Israeli-occupied West Bank and reported that medical conditions were not all bad. Stung by such an affront to the anti-Israel ideology which seems to have become the only acceptable reality at some of these United Nations gatherings, a large majority, led by India, promptly rejected their report. Not ashamed of pedantry when it suits their political purpose, the leaders of the majority called the report unacceptable because the three experts had not been officially received in Israel as a group.

The saddest feature of this charade played out in the specialized agencies is the perversion of years of devoted effort by genuinely nonpolitical technicians to build a cooperative framework for the alleviation of human suffering. Nations of the W.H.O. majority are not only undermining the organization's potential for improving medical care on the West Bank and, for that matter, India and elsewhere. They are also making themselves and the W.H.O. look silly.

Letters to the Editor

City Bankruptcy: 'A Sound Alternative'

To the Editor:
The bankruptcy option which you denounce in a recent editorial is not a "myth" created by "glib politicians" but a new, legitimate and sound alternative made possible by a law signed by President Ford on April 8. This means that we now have a choice of options—and these options determine who gets what first.

Under the existing plan, approved by the Emergency Financial Control Board, the first priority is for the payment of short-term and long-term debts from funds available over a three-year period during which the budget must be balanced.

Under the new law, once the city goes into court, all debt payments are automatically halted until a plan for payment of these debts—which could be a three-year or a thirty-year plan—is agreed upon. Under this option, debt payments have the last priority. The first mandate of the court is to provide for the operating expenses of the city and, indeed, the judge is authorized to issue certificates of indebtedness for this purpose if necessary.

The argument of the Citizen's Budget Commission that the court may not use the $2.3 billion now assigned to debt service for any other purpose has no merit whatsoever. Section 82 of the new law provides that the court may permit the issuance of certificates of indebtedness "with such security and priority in payment over existing obligations, secured or unsecured . . . as in the particular case may be equitable." Therefore, the court could and probably would give these certificates first priority over the $2.3 billion.

I cannot know what a court would decide but I do know what Congress said and intended to say, as I am a member of the subcommittee that wrote the new law. It was not written by "smart alecks" but by a number of serious, concerned people, working long hours for many months to provide a procedure by which debts can be paid while cities continue to exist. In my own case, I felt that such a bill was essential to provide a needed option to New York.

It is no coincidence that, since the law was passed, there is renewed interest in re-negotiating the existing three-year plan to defer debt payments for a longer period so that additional sums may be available for city services. Any revised plan, prepared in or out of court, should reflect that debt service is important, but it is only one of many services the city must take into account. HERMAN BABALLO, Member of Congress, 21 Dist., N. Y., Washington, May 13, 1976

Delegate's Choice

To the Editor:
Former Governor Wilson's statement criticizing the Brooklyn G.O.P. delegation's support for Reagan as a "breach of trust" bears scrutiny.

At what point is an uncommitted delegate free to make a choice? Isn't the uncommitted delegate telling the voter, "I lack sufficient information to make a judgment at this time, but when the facts are available, I will declare myself?"

Viewing the various primaries as a pulse of the voters' mood, the candidates' respective abilities to sell themselves and the opportunity to evaluate the probable issues to be developed by the opposition candidate, the Brooklyn delegation deemed it time to take a stand.

What happened in Brooklyn might have been impolitic but it hardly can be construed as a pledge violation to the enrolled Republican.

Taxes: The Reagan Share

To the Editor:
The statement by Mr. Reagan's aide that The Times's figures on Mr. Reagan's income taxes are not accurate will not do. If Reagan wants to be credible he will reveal the amount of taxes he paid in 1970 through 1975 and what tax-exempt income — not stated on the returns—the Reagans received. Then we can judge if they have borne their fair share. MARTIN PEPPER, New York, May 19, 1976

'Don't Foul the Footways'

To the Editor:
As a long-suffering victim of polluting dog owners, I heartily endorse Stella Heiden's suggestion [letter May 14].

The problem, however, is not lack of law; there is a city statute calling for a $25 fine for littering. The difficulty is lack of enforcement. I have never seen a summons being issued to flagrant violators of the sanitary code.

Most dog owners seem to have one purpose in life: to walk their dogs at least one or two blocks away from their residence before allowing them to drop their effluence wherever they please. The result is a daily, gigantic exchange. I admire the phraseology of the London street sign: "Any person in charge of a dog which fouls a footway is liable to a fine of £20." Dog owners, please don't foul the footways. ROBERT FRIEDBERG, Brooklyn, May 17, 1976

Of Rents and Good Sense

To the Editor:
It is with much apprehension that my wife and I read about the negotiations that could lead to a removal of controls on apartments renting for more than $300 a month because that hits us right where we live—in a place where just in the last year, between the 7 percent increase and the added fuel surcharge, the rent has been nudged up to just a dollar and change above the $300 mark.

If all controls were lifted, our rent could zoom as high as $600 to $700, which would effectively drive us, and tens of thousands of taxpaying middle-class families like us, out of New York City. That would be bad news not only for us personally but, it would

The Case for Window Guards

To the Editor:
In an April 27 letter Messrs. Decker and Janz contend, inter alia, that the cost of mandating the provision of window guards to safeguard the lives of children ten years and younger could amount to hundreds of millions of dollars "far exceeding any reasonable measure of the benefits to be accrued."

To the contrary, a realistic estimate of cost in fact is well under $20 million for the entire city. The current reported price of a window guard is about $16. Purchase, in bulk, by the New York City Health Department currently costs about $2.60 per window guard. Indeed, the price may fall further as a result of mass manufacture and competition.

The letter also alleges that this window guard program "unduly infringes on the area of parental responsibility." Unduly? Does this argument have intellectual substance? If so, then in a similar manner the Health Department's concomitant insistence on the use of non-lead paint in homes also "unduly infringes on the area of parental responsibility." After all, it's the parents' job isn't it, to prevent their children from gnawing the paint on window sills, just as it is their responsibility to prevent their children from climbing up on these same window sills and falling to their deaths? Our Health Department statistics between 1973 and 1975 inclusive disclose 474 falls reported and 73 fatalities resulting therefrom. The real numbers are many times those reported. Moreover, the cost of hospitalization, after-care and maintenance of victims of falls who survive is instructive. For the two-year period, 1974 and 1975, inpatient cost of treatment for victims of falls in New York City was $544,905. This figure does not cover cost of emergency room treatment for patients admitted to hospitals, nor the cost of after-care, rehabilitation and maintenance of the severely and permanently disabled. Cost alone, of course, is hardly a measure of the human suffering implicit in the permanently injured children who now must spend the rest of their lives as public charges, brain impaired, blind, without limbs or maimed by the loss of vital organs, such as kidneys and spleens.

Modifications of the Sanitary Code on the part of the New York City Board of Health assuredly cannot eliminate every potential health and safety hazard. But, this window guard regulation will prevent preventable tragedies, in this case, a death rate due to falls in the age group one to four, 60 percent higher than the national average, and higher than some of the more widely publicized childhood diseases, such as leukemia. "Henry Kissinger." "You rate Henry Kissinger below Richard Nixon?" "Just in brains and wit. In character and credibility they're the same." "Skip, going back to that subject of lying under oath. You remember that a former Attorney General of the United States was accused of lying under oath during his confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee. Now, this is perjury. Yet, he was allowed to plead guilty to just a misdemeanor and to continue practicing law. Can you tell us why he was given such lenient treatment that normally is denied to other criminals?" "I don't know." "It's a little fishy, though, isn't it?" "It's fishy as hell." "That's not for attribution, is it?" "Of course not. Who's next?" Spiro Agnew and the Jews

ESSAY By William Safire

WASHINGTON — The anti-Israel as a new champion: my old and former colleague, novelist Spiro Agnew. Up to now, the anti-lobby was made up of these or elements: Jewish columnists and longtime at the State Department who believe that support of Israel lines our influence in the oil Arab world and thus is America's self-interest; Jewish writers and longtime libel-litigating Jews who comfortable with positions of strength, and who urge leagued, Israelis to adopt ment under the labels of "moderation," "flexibility" and "peace"; Secretary of State and his nts who grind out propaganda ground to chastise Israel as "agent" for not giving up its to make a quick-fixer look usual assertion of anti-ous of the status earned y individual Jews, who share viction: that the Jews control pulate America, and are the ause of most other people's a failures. e head of this powerful and- conglomeration rides Ted plugging his novel, on media nts to give him access so as e his accusations of one- s are wrong. required him to, but many believe that judgment was wrong. A second, perhaps more serious mistake has been for the judge to involve himself deeply in day-to-day administration of school affairs. He has even held hearings to decide, one by one, which temporary teachers could be laid off—and refused to allow most of the proposed layoffs. He has directed the city, whose finances are strained, to spend more money on a school system that many experts think wastes vast sums now. Excessive intervention by the judge is a serious philosophical error. American judges have to handle many controversial problems with political implications—restricting prisons and the like. Their object should always be to nudge elected officials into performing their responsibility. Judge Garry's course tends to take responsibility away from those who ought to be seen to bear it. The judge did have to deal with a crudely intransigent School Committee—one that would do nothing except

The Boston Schools: II

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON, May 23—For a decade after the Supreme Court held school segregation unconstitutional in 1954, the Federal judges of the South struggled almost alone to carry out the decision. With little help from Washington, they stood up to massive political resistance and personal attack in their own communities. A book on their performance, by J. W. Peltason, is called "Fifty-Eight Lonely Men." For the last two years in Boston, a similar burden has fallen on one lonely Federal district judge, W. Arthur Garrity Jr., who has had little support from Boston's political leadership in trying to correct deliberate segregation in the school system. Like his Southern colleagues, he has been subjected to vile personal abuse and seen his orders threatened by violence. And the Boston school case presented exceptional difficulties. The city has had a poor school system for decades, ridden with politics. Over the years the authorities planned districts and buildings to keep most black children in separate and inferior schools. It was segregation of a kind very hard to remedy. Boston is a small city with distinct ethnic communities. There was no way to undo the wrongs of the past without ordering some school busing across those lines—and that was sure to arouse resentments. Nor could a judge in conscience remit the complaining black families to their political remedy. Blacks have little political power in Boston. No black has ever served on the School Committee, whose members are elected at large in a city with a 20 per cent black population. For all those reasons, any fair appraisal of the Boston school controversy has to begin with a large measure of sympathy for Judge Garrity. Nor is it to be doubted that he made a good-faith effort to do what he thought the law demanded. And his orders have had some beneficial effects, especially in the elementary schools. But realism forces recognition that, in their totality, Judge Garrity's efforts are not working well. Racial animosity is not diminishing. Respect for law and the courts is not increasing. One cannot look ahead and see a happy ending to this case. What has gone wrong? One mistake has been Judge Garrity's failure to follow good advice that was available to him. He wisely appointed a set of masters, including both political and academic figures, to advise him. But then he rejected the masters' plan for the current school year—one that would have had more community support than his own. He did so because he thought the law ence is the fact that Mahd adh Dhahab was within range of Israel's transport capab- ility.

Solomon's empire relied on the port of Aqaba. Ships frequently sailed from there south through the Red Sea. Mahd adh Dhahab would have been easily accessible just 372 miles south of Aqaba and 149 miles inland.
Furthermore, the scientists said, Mahd adh Dhahab could easily have been known to Solomon or his advisers because it lies on a north-south trade route that has run to Arabia for some 4,000 years. If gold was to be seen on the surface of the ground, word of such a thing would surely have reached Judea.
"Thus," Dr. Luce said, "we conclude that Mahd adh Dhahab could have produced 24 tons of gold in ancient times and was the biblical Ophir. We believe that the legendary 'King Solomon's Lost Mines' are no longer lost."
The American-Saudi study team has also established that the mine and the surrounding area still contain workable deposits of gold, silver and other metals. At least one mining company has applied to the Saudi government for a license to reopen the mine.

Unbowed Class of '26 Revisits Vassar

By JOYCE MAYNARD
Special to The New York Times

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., May 23—Three young girls in faded jeans sitting on the dormitory steps might only vaguely know who Rudy Vassar was, but Frances Pruyt remembers. He serenaded her, from the grass below Room 812, in the North Tower of Vassar, in the spring of 1924.

Over the weekend, Mrs. Pruyt returned to Vassar, along with 87 of her classmates, for the 50th reunion of the class of 1926. Some of the women, whose ages were 71 and 72, looked frail, and most took their time climbing steps, but it was by and large a lively group.

There's been a Depression since 1926, and more than one war. Chapel is no longer compulsory. There are blacks at Vassar now—and men—and the scent drifting through the halls of dormitories like North Tower is less likely to be lily-of-the-valley toilet water than mar-juana. The old ballroom has been turned into a cafeteria.

Almost Half Have Died
Almost half of the girls who waited and Charle-toned there, and surreptitiously smoked cigarettes behind the chapel, and picked 10,000 daisies for Graduation Day in 1926, are dead now (or, in the words of Frances Stevenson Pruyt, "in necrology").

But a surprisingly large number of those still living showed up at the reunion. Most of the ones who married (as most of the class did) are widowed now, and, as one of them put it, "losing the man you were closest with makes you go back to earlier times, to the closeness you once had with your women friends."

"You just can't get away from the power of the number," said Helen Brandt Ross. It's 50. That's five-zero. That's big.
Winifred Armstrong said, "I just wanted to see what everyone looked like."

A Handsome Group
In spite of a few canes, the class of '26 remained an impressively spry-looking and, in some cases, a positively glamorous group. At the first reunion dinner, Friday night, several wore false eyelashes. Connie Smith Whitman sported earrings made from flashcubes. Elizabeth Hyde Brownell wore leopard-skin-striped jersey, and Peggy Miller Gaillard inspired the husband of one of the women to remark that she'd always been the prettiest girl in the class.

It was the tradition at Vassar back in 1926, for the students to choose the 20 best-looking girls every year, to form the famous Daisy Chain at graduation.
"We all dressed identically back then," said Martha Stiles Slack, surveying the rich variation of clothing worn by the younger women from more recent classes, milling about at the reunion. "There was none of this individuality business. We all had our hair bobbed. We all had chemises and fur coats for West Point and a brand of bra known as 'Boishish Form.' They were the worst!"

The '26 graduates, studying the exhibit, seemed divided in their view of "the Vassar education."

Memories of Debs
Peg Eighmy is a third generation Vassar graduate, one of those who were registered at the school from birth. Her memories of Vassar concern the singing of class songs, on the steps of Main Hall, and tea dances with Yale boys.

Agnes Sailer and Alice Hell Larkin and Kitty Pollak Ellickson, on the other hand, describe themselves as members of "the intellectual set," who spent most of their time in the library, or working on the 1924 Presidential campaign of Robert M. La Follette, and researching the conditions of West Virginia coal miners.

For Agnes Larkin, a small woman in tennis shoes, whose hair is still dark brown, a highlight of the Vassar years was hearing Eugene Debs speak. "I had such high hopes then," she sighed. "We were going to organize the American workers, achieve graduated in-

 - After they exploded grenades on the plane setting it afire, three of the six hijackers who seized the Philippines Air Lines jet Friday were killed yesterday with 10 of their 86 hostages when a gun battle broke out between the hijackers and troops in Zamboanga, 530 miles south of Manila, where the plane's captors had forced it to land. Twenty-two other passengers were wounded, and 54 escaped through emergency exits. Seventeen other hostages had previously been released by the hijackers. The three remaining hijackers were captured, but were seriously wounded. They had identified themselves as members of a Moslem separatist movement. [Page 1, Columns 1-4.]
 - Prominent officials of the leftist opposition in France attacked President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing's proposal to send troops to Lebanon, and a national political dispute seemed to be growing. Two Cabinet members are supporting the President—Finance Minister Jean-Pierre Fourcade and Justice Minister Jean Lecanuet. But there has been no comment from the two men who were sent by the President to Lebanon over the past six months to try to mediate in a settlement of the civil war—former Prime Minister Maurice Couve-de Murville, and Georges Gorne, a Middle East expert. [1:1.]
- National
 - Jimmy Carter's poor showing in the Michigan and Maryland primaries last week cost him support over the weekend when delegates to the Democratic National Convention were selected in four states. His biggest disappointment was in Virginia, which gave him only 23 delegates instead of the expected 35 out of 54. But he got more delegates from the series of state and district conventions than any other candidate, adding 27 and making a total of 740, about three times as many as his nearest rival, Representative Morris K. Udall, who gained 17 delegates. President Ford was the victor in the four states that held Republican conventions, getting 55 delegates compared with 14 committed to Ronald Reagan. In addition, 88 members of the Pennsylvania's 103-member delegation, voting in Harrisburg, committed themselves to Mr. Ford. [1:8.]

 - In June 1974, two secret police agents began negotiations to buy a Bronx discotheque, which they planned to use as a base for spying on the Mafia. But, instead of being solely an undercover mission against organized crime, that investigation put law-enforcement officials on the trail of possible major corruption scandals in the courts and the State liquor Authority and to allegations that judgeships were sold in the Bronx. The second article on the ramifications of the initial investigation appears today. [1:6-7.]
 - Cheating at West Point has been more widespread than had previously been indicated, according to Lieut. Gen. Sidney Berry, the Superintendent of the United States Military Academy. He announced a new review panel of officers and cadets that will study "new evidence" that he said was recently found by faculty members of the electrical engineering department. Many of the 48 cadets who have been formally charged with improper collaboration on an engineering examination said that "hundreds" actually had been involved. [1:6-7.]
 - The Transit Authority charged that the New York City's Bureau of Franchises repeatedly awarded the best bus routes to private bus companies, and it called on Mayor Beame to investigate. [1:5-7.]
 - Karen Anne Quinlan, who has been in a coma for 13 months, reportedly has been breathing without the aid of a mechanical respirator for more than four days at the New Jersey hospital that has been caring for her and has been moved from the intensive-care unit to a private room. Her physicians were said to have been "wearing" Miss Quinlan from the respirator for longer and longer periods for the last three weeks. However, she is still described as in a "chronic vegetative state." [1:8-8.]

Municipal Hospitals Plan Strike Talks With Union Today

The threat of a strike at the 18 municipal hospitals was temporarily eased as a meeting was set up for today involving the Health and Hospitals Corporation, a hospital union and New York City officials to discuss a possible compromise in the planned layoffs of 3,200 workers.
Local 420 of District Council 37 of the State, County and Municipal Employees had threatened to strike today if the layoffs took place. The hospitals corporation had put off until today a decision on the layoffs.
Lillian Roberts, associate director of Local 420, eased the situation a bit yesterday when she said the union would give the corporation 48-hours notice of intention to strike whenever the layoff decision was sent out. This would leave the way open for negotiation, she said.
John L. S. Holloman Jr., president of the hospitals corporation, lessened the threat further when he set up today's meeting, which is set for 1 P.M. at his agency's offices, at 125 Worth Street. He had not met with the union for about a week.
The hospitals corporation has announced that it will close five of its hospitals as part of an austerity program caused by the city's budgetary problems. The closings are expected to save $159 million.
As a result of the walkout threat by Local 420, a strike alert had been set up at the city hospitals. Only patients requiring emergency care were being admitted in some hospitals.
The five facilities marked for closing in a vote by the hospital corporation's board of directors were Sydenham Hospital in Harlem, the inpatient and emergency-room services of Gouverneur Hospital on the lower East Side, the Belvis Neighborhood Family Care Center in the Bronx and the G Wing of Seawing Hospital on Staten Island.

U.S. Asks DC-10 Changes To Combat Bird Ingestion

By RICHARD WITKIN

The Government has proposed mandatory modification of DC-10 engines in an effort to insure against a repetition of the accident here last fall in which one of the jumbo jets was destroyed after seagulls had been ingested into an engine on a takeoff run.

None of the 139 persons on board was killed, largely because they were all airborne employees well-trained in the use of escape doors and slides.

The corrective measures were recommended as a voluntary step last month in a bulletin from the engine builder, the General Electric Company, to all airlines operating the tri-jet DC-10 or the twin-jet A-300B, a European Airbus using the same type of power plant.

However, it has taken until now for the Federal Aviation Administration to concur with the builder's approach. Details of the improvement program, with a proposed deadline for compliance of June 1, 1977, were to be published today in the Federal Register.

Limited Application For the moment, the modification will apply only to the higher-powered version of the DC-10 engine. It involves replacing a phenolic plastic material that evidently ignited and produced explosive overpressures in the engine, which occurred at Kennedy International Airport.

The trouble was that if the scraping was severe, the phenolic material turned into fine powder, which then flew back into the high-speed compressor. And, as the F.A.A. points out in its proposed mandatory modification, when a sufficient quantity accumulates, "overpressures and explosion can result."

On a subsequent bird-strike simulation, the phenolic material was replaced by aluminum honeycomb, which has an ignition temperature twice as high. This time, the high-speed compressor casing held together.

What about the scores of DC-10's that are flying many more weeks and months before the proposed switch of materials can be made? General Electric argues that there has been only one complete casing separation and resultant destruction of the airplane in 4.5 million hours of operations of the engine involved. The company insists that chances of a repeat are therefore "statistically insignificant."

This is particularly so, it is contended, in view of stepped-up precautions against birds. Federal officials appear to agree that more drastic changes in the engine are not dictated at the moment.

Black Woman Believed Choice To Run Equal Employment Unit

By ERNEST HOLSENDOLEPH

WASHINGTON, May 23—Ersa Poston, who is chairman of the New York State Civil Service Commission during Governor Rockefeller's last term, is reportedly the Administration's choice to be the new chairman of the embattled Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

Mrs. Poston, who is black and a Republican, heads a list of people favored for the job by the Ford Administration, but he has not yet accepted, according to a number of sources here today.

Sources on the commission and in the New York Congressional delegation said that Mrs. Poston was favorably discussed last week by civil rights leaders and by the Congressional black Caucus.

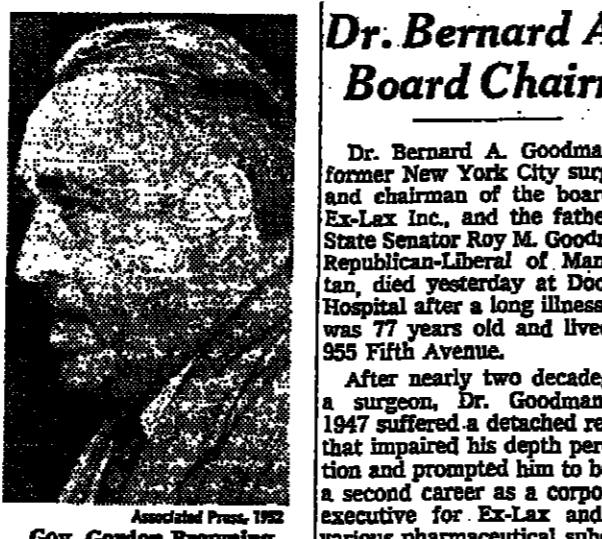

Others whom Administration recruiters found to be qualified candidates for the job, according to several sources, were Samuel Jackson, the former assistant secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development and a former E.E.O.C. commissioner; and Timothy Jenkins, the former city administrator here.

Subject of Inquiries In recent weeks the commission, which has the primary responsibility for enforcing fair hiring practices in the private employment sector, has been the subject of numerous investigations following the disclosure of audits that contained charges of mismanagement, irregularities and alleged criminal misconduct in field offices of the agency.

The audits were commissioned by Lowell W. Perry when he became chairman last May, but he declined to act on them until they had been leaked to Congressional investigators several weeks ago.

The agency has also fallen behind in its processing of employment complaints, although the rate of discrimination charges being filed has declined in the last six months. According to some estimates, the commission may have more than 130,000 complaints on file at the end of June, with the average complaint pending for more than two years.

The chairmanship of the commission has been vacant since May 15, when Mr. Perry resigned after one year on the job. He rejoined the Chrysler Corporation in Detroit as a personnel director of the manufacturing division.

Gov. Gordon Browning

EX-GOV. BROWNING OF TENNESSEE, 86

Congressman and Opponent of Crump Machine Dies

HUNTINGDON, Tenn., May 23 (UPI)—Former Gov. Gordon Browning died today at Carroll County General Hospital. He was 86 years old.

Mr. Browning served three terms as Governor and six terms as a Congressman. A veteran of both world wars, he made one of the strongest comebacks in Tennessee political history for election to a second term as the state's chief executive in 1948.

Mr. Browning was Governor from 1937 to 1939 and from 1949 to 1953. He lost the gubernatorial race to Frank Clement in 1954.

During his first gubernatorial campaign in 1936, Mr. Browning had what he called the unopposed support of E. H. Crump, the political boss. Shortly after his inauguration, Mr. Browning openly split with the Memphis millionaire-politician.

Pushed Bills Through Governor Browning pushed through the 1937 Legislature several bills aimed at the Memphis political organization and was defeated in his bid for re-election in 1938 by the Crump-backed candidate, Prentice Cooper.

A decade passed before Governor Browning was able to "vindicate my first administration of 10 years ago and to give Tennessee back to Tennesseans." The so-called "forgotten men" of the Tennessee politics went back to the Governor's office on the same day Crump voters that elected the late Estes Kefauver to the United States Senate.

Mr. Browning was elected to Congress in 1922 and remained in the House for six terms. During World War II, he spent nearly three of his four years of military service overseas.

His name was placed on the ballot for Governor in 1946 while he was still in Germany. Although he lost that race to Jim McCord and could not conduct a campaign, he received more than one-third of the 275,000 votes cast.

Two years later, Mr. Browning again faced Mr. McCord and this time turned the tables on the Crump-backed candidate.

Zaire Leader Said to See Inevitable War in Rhodesia Time magazine, in its current issue, quotes Zaire's President, Mobutu Sese Seko, as saying that he expects war in white-ruled Rhodesia.

Asked about the possibility of war there, he replied, according to Time: "It is absolutely inevitable." "Africa cannot stay with its arms crossed," he said. "It has to do something to get rid of Ian Smith."

President Mobutu made it clear that he felt there was a place for whites who wished to remain in Rhodesia. "I am sure a lot of whites would like to stay in the country and if they do, their rights as a minority group will be respected," he said.

Jacob Starr, 87, President Of Arkraft Strauss, Is Dead

Jacob Starr, president of the Arkraft Strauss Sign Corporation for the last 50 years and a pioneer in the electronic advertising industry, died Saturday at Doctors Hospital. He was 87 years old and lived at 1095 Park Avenue.

Known in the trade as "the lamplighter of Broadway," Mr. Starr and his partners, Ben Strauss, probably did as much as, if not more than, any other two men to change the face of the so-called Great White Way. Their "spectaculars" intrigued millions of visitors to the Times Square area.

Mr. Starr was never convinced that the bright, carnival-colored, flashing displays were too garish. He frequently pointed out with a disarming smile that the purpose of the signs was to sell tickets.

His thesis was that they seldom remained up long enough to become eyesores and sometimes, he used to say, they even improved the tone of Broadway. To doubters he would point with pride to what he called the "pastoral beauty" of the mammoth display on "How Green Was My Valley," which a general agency covered the front of the Rivoli Theater, or to the

Dr. Bernard A. Goodman Dies; Board Chairman of Ex-Lax Inc.

Dr. Bernard A. Goodman

Dr. Bernard A. Goodman, a former New York City surgeon and chairman of the board of Ex-Lax Inc. and the father of State Senator Roy M. Goodman, died yesterday at Doctors Hospital after a long illness. He was 77 years old and lived at 955 Fifth Avenue.

After nearly two decades as a surgeon, Dr. Goodman in 1947 suffered a detached retina that impaired his depth perception and prompted him to begin a second career as a corporate executive for Ex-Lax and its various pharmaceutical subsidiaries.

He was a director and company officer for a number of years before assuming the board chairmanship in 1963. Since 1971, he had been honorary chairman, but had continued to serve as a corporate consultant and remained active in many philanthropies.

For more than 25 years, Dr. Goodman had been a trustee of a family foundation that aided medical and educational causes in the United States and Israel.

During World War II, as a lieutenant commander in the Navy Medical Corps, Dr. Goodman was chief of surgery at a mobile field hospital at Pago Pago, Samoa. His commanding officer, in a book written after the war, said of him: "He was a surgeon of high skill and judgment, with an instantly sympathetic understanding of all who came near him that inspired the respect and confidence of his patients and associates."

Bernard Adolph Goodman was born at Waco, Tex., on July 7, 1898, the son of Israel and Rae Coblenz Goodman. After service as an enlisted man in World War I, he attended Baylor University and Columbia University and obtained his medical degree in 1927 from the Long Island College of Medicine in Brooklyn.

After further studies in Vienna, Budapest and Berlin, Dr. Goodman began the practice of general abdominal surgery in 1928, working at several hospitals, though mostly at what is now New York University Hospital. He was the author of numerous articles for medical journals.

In 1928, Dr. Goodman married Alice Matz, daughter of Israel Matz, the manufacturer and philanthropist who founded Ex-Lax Inc. The couple's son, a former New York City Finance Administrator, was elected to the State Senate in 1968, representing Manhattan's 26th District.

Dr. Goodman is survived by his wife, his son, two sisters and three grandchildren. The funeral will be held at Frank E. Campbell, 10 A.M. tomorrow, at 10 A.M. tomorrow.

JOSEPH P. DUNN, 64, JERSEY BANK HEAD

Joseph P. Dunn, president and chairman of the Security National Bank of New Jersey since 1966, died Saturday at St. Michael's Hospital in Newark. He was 64 years old and lived at 90 Oldchester Road, Essex Fells, N. J.

Mr. Dunn graduated from the Rutgers University Law School in 1937. In addition to his bank presidency, he was a partner in the Newark law firm of Dunn & Pykon. He was an assistant United States attorney for the Eastern District in the mid-fifties, and from 1960 to 1961 was parliamentary and counsel for the New Jersey State Assembly.

In 1962, Mr. Dunn was named a director of the Federal Home Loan Bank of New York and served as its chairman in 1964-1965. He was for a short time general counsel for the New Jersey Building and Construction Trades Council of New Jersey.

His wife, the former Dorothy Donnelly, survives.

YUBA CITY, CALIF., MAY 23 (UPI)—Residents of this farm community filled churches here today in mourning the loss of 27 of the town's high school teen-agers killed in a bus accident.

They wept as clergymen offered prayers, condolences and special services, including folk songs in teen-agers, with parents and friends of the victims.

Federal and state investigators, meanwhile, examined the wreck to learn the cause of the crash Friday in which the bus carrying the Yuba City High School choir to a performance, plunged 30 feet off a freeway ramp 90 miles south at Martinez and landed upside down.

An adult chaperone also was killed and 24 persons were injured, including the driver of the 26-year-old bus, Evan Prothero, 50, who remained in critical condition.

Beame Administration Plans to Press Case on Bronx Terminal Market Rent

By JOHN L. HESS

After a six-month string of financial disputes in which New York City quietly abandoned claims against the Arol Development Corporation, the Beame administration has decided to take at least one case to court.

of the escrow to Mr. Buntzman in 1972.

The second affair began in 1971, when Arol rented the main building of the Bronx Terminal Market at $25,800 a month and began collecting rent from its tenants. Arol never paid the city.

Arol thereupon began withholding 43.5 percent of the rent, while the Department of Ports and Terminals put up for bidding the job of clearing the equipment out to make the space rentable.

Rolling Favors Arol

The Department of Ports and Terminals figured that Arol owed the city $142,175 for the nine months of the permit while Arol held that it owed nothing. The Economic Development Administration ruled for Arol.

By then, Arol had obtained a 99-year lease on the entire market, at zero rent for the first year, rising to $200,000 a year.

The record is replete with officials' misunderstandings of alleged commitments by Arol.

The first involved Mr. Buntzman's sale to the city in 1970 of a plot of land on East 149th Street and Bruckner Boulevard in the Bronx, for $2.1 million.

Before the lease was granted, the city estimated that it had a rent roll of $925,000 a year from the market, and was spending $560,000. But its expenses did not stop.

The implication that your administration has any rights to interfere with Arol Development in the management, operation and control of Bronx Terminal Market, other than a nonbinding expression of opinion, is wholly unwarranted and presumptuous.

Dr. Frank Cicero, second deputy commissioner of health within the State Health Department, defended the department's handling of Madison Avenue Hospital mainly on the ground that the department did not have legal jurisdiction over proprietary hospitals in the city.

The evidence upon which he based his complaint was a survey of the hospital completed by the New York State Health Department in May 1974.

Over the last year, officials of the hospital negotiated with the Bureau of Health Insurance over proposals to correct the deficiencies. The Bureau ultimately decided that none of the proposals would be satisfactory.

Attempt by Police Undercover Agents to Buy Bronx Bar Involved Cunningham aplomb and coolness he had shown on other dangerous undercover jobs.

Furthermore, the detective had gained the confidence of the informer who, at first, was apprehensive about working

The 'Watering Hole'

The cover story for the detective and the informer was that they had met in prison and had underworld money behind them with which to purchase bars. The two spent the months of April and May 1974 recon-

Late in May, the search switched to the Bronx after the office of District Attorney Mario Merola of the Bronx had notified strike force officials that the Last Laff was for sale.

William I. Aronwald, who is in charge of the Federal strike force in the metropolitan area, said that officials had concentrated on the Last Laff because it was "a good opportunity to get close to the action."

On June 26, 1974, Detective Spinelli, "T-1" and the Margolins went to the offices of Mr. Mercorella and Mr. Kase at 600 Madison Avenue.

with the city police. The informer said that he had feared that information in the department was being given to organized crime.

As a safeguard, the informer's name was never used on official reports. He usually was referred to in these documents as "T-1."

Liquor Authority records and "concealed" $55,000 as an illegal "under-the-table" payment.

Detective Spinelli and "T-1" visited the Last Laff almost nightly. From the outset, the detective observed in reports that members of the Carlo Gambino and Carmine Tramunti crime families habitually ate or drank at the establishment.

Another person involved in the sale was Howard Margolin's father, Rubin, 64. The elder Margolin was characterized in official reports as a bookmaker and heavy gambler who was believed to have ties to organized crime.

Detective Spinelli and "T-1" told the Margolins that they owned bars in the city and out of state and were seeking to expand their activities.

Both Margolins, according to police reports, refused to lower the $75,000 price and, moreover, told the prospective buyers that they would have to obtain the liquor license through a law firm, which then was run by former Assemblyman and Councilman Anthony J. Mercorella and Kenneth Kase.

An A.B.C. Connection

But, of more importance to strike force officials was a suggestion of corruption. "On this date," Detective Spinelli wrote in a report, "at a meeting with attorney Kenneth Kase, he [Mr. Kase] stated, in front of T-1, myself, Rubin and Howard Margolin that he has a connection in the A.B.C. board, that his connection is one of the 'supervisors' and that he (supervisor) could expedite the necessary paperwork of the liquor license." A week later, on July 3, 1974, Detective Spinelli, "T-1" and the Margolins held another conference with Mr. Kase in his office. The detective, in his report, said he had turned over $2,500 in marked money to Mr. Kase as a down payment for the Last Laff.

With negotiations for the Last Laff proceeding smoothly, a second undercover detective, Sgt. Jack Morano was brought into the investigation. Since Detective Spinelli had feigned a criminal record and "T-1" had a real one, both would have been ineligible to get a liquor license.

Another important episode occurred on July 18, 1974, at a business meeting in the offices of Mr. Mercorella and Mr. Kase. In reports on the meeting, the undercover officers said that before they would give any more money for the Last Laff they wanted stronger assurances that S.I.A. would approve their application.

A report signed by Sergeant Morano stated: "During the meeting, Councilman Mercorella sat in for a few minutes. Kenneth Kase suggested to Mercorella that their friend in the S.I.A. might be able to smooth over a problem that might arise in our license application. Mercorella responded in the affirmative."

Some Secret Recordings

At meetings with Mr. Kase and Mr. Mercorella, the detectives routinely carried concealed tape recorders. The July 18 conversation with the lawyers about asserted intervention by an S.I.A. commissioner was secretly recorded.

According to law-enforcement officials who have heard the recording of that meeting, Mr. Mercorella supposedly referred by first name to an S.I.A. commissioner who he said would assist in getting the license. After identifying the commissioner, the councilman is said to have added: "No problem there."

Applications for liquor licenses in the city are investigated by the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission, a local branch of the S.I.A. But, it is the five S.I.A. commissioners who have the final authority on granting licenses.

With negotiations for the Last Laff proceeding smoothly, a second undercover detective, Sgt. Jack Morano was brought into the investigation.

A report signed by Sergeant Morano stated: "During the meeting, Councilman Mercorella sat in for a few minutes. Kenneth Kase suggested to Mercorella that their friend in the S.I.A. might be able to smooth over a problem that might arise in our license application.

By this time, the task force was keeping a close watch on Mr. Kase. On July 25, a day after the $500 allegedly was turned over to him, Mr. Kase met for lunch in the City Hall area with Mr. Regan and William Weiss, 55, a beverage control investigator for the A.B.C.

Their noontime meeting was at the Barclay Downtown Restaurant, 57 Murray Street, one block from A.B.C. headquarters at 50 Park Place.

Unknown to Mr. Kase or the two commission employees, detectives in a camouflaged truck were prepared to film any meetings the lawyer would have on the street. Inside the restaurant, an undercover detective, James J. Sampel, was stationed at the bar.

Detective Sampel managed to get into a conversation with Mr. Weiss and Mr. Regan who were also at the bar until Mr. Kase arrived. The officer, according to a report that he filed that day, said that he had heard Mr. Kase and Mr. Regan talking about "a bar deal on Pelham Parkway."

for a license to acquire the Last Laff. "Most of these questions were either answered by Kase or by Weiss himself," the sergeant wrote in his report.

Later, as they were leaving the commission's office, Sergeant Morano said that "Kase began to point out in a boastful manner the way Weiss had handled me. Indicating to me how he gets things done. He stated that, 'I might not be the best lawyer' and went on to say, in effect, that he has the right connections."

"At this point," the report continued, "I told Kase that he probably pocketed the $500 I gave him or just gave them half. Kase excitedly told me to search him, began taking money out of his pockets and stated, 'You gave me all fifties—give me a toss [search]! I assured Kase that I was only kidding and we both got in Kase's car and drove off."

The Watchers Are Watched

While arrangements were being completed for the liquor license, the undercover agents were being closely watched themselves by some of the patrons at the Last Laff. One of these customers was Joseph Gambino, a reputed crime figure who is a nephew of Carlo Gambino, the "boss of bosses" in New York.

Detective Spinelli in a report on one night's activities, wrote: "Joe Gambino called T-1 aside and asked, 'Who are you with or who do you know?' The informer provided the name of a Manhattan Mafia whom he did know."

In his report, Detective Spinelli said that Mr. Gambino told "T-1" that if he was associated with this member of the underworld "then you have nothing to worry about—cause I like you."

The first clear sign, however, that Project Scotch might be in trouble came on Aug. 27, 1974. Howard Margolin, who was still the owner of the Last Laff, warned Sergeant Morano that customers at the discotheque had become suspicious of the three newcomers.

Controversy Over Project

Several police officials are now known to have disagreed with the Federal decision to end the project in September 1974. These officials pointed out that in late August the liquor license for the undercover firm—known as the J.I.C. Corporation—had been granted by the S.I.A. and that the three agents were ready to begin full-time activities at the Last Laff.

"There was nothing to lose," said one police official, who asked that his name be withheld because of future combined operations with the Justice Department. "Plenty of bad guys were still showing up at the place and there was no certainty that the cover had been blown."

"We had finally landed in the perfect Mafia joint and a lot more information could have been realized," he asserted. The Last Laff was closed down in December 1974, shortly after the Margolins were arrested on charges.

Project Scotch Success

Although Project Scotch seemingly was a limited success in penetrating organized crime, it nevertheless was responsible for several unanticipated cases. Based partly on information supplied by the undercover detectives, the Margolins and six other co-defendants were convicted on Federal charges of transporting and selling guns.

Other potential criminal matters unearthed by Project Scotch were turned over for jurisdictional reasons to the office of the special state prosecutor, Maurice H. Nadjar. Some of this evidence was used to get court approval for telephone wire taps on Mr. Mercorella and Mr. Kase. It was these taps that accidentally led to an investigation of Mr. Cunningham—who is also the Bronx Democratic chairman—and other party officials on purported charges of having sold judgeships.

Mr. Cunningham has been named in court papers as one of the targets of Mr. Nadjar's investigation, but no formal charges have been placed against him. The charges raised by the project include embezzlement with its members and inducements at the Last Laff to a return of "pads" of police corruption, violations of mob-run places and illegal Project Scotch an investigation by t

The $7.85 Murder

By TOM BUCKLEY

More than 700 people attended Asher Miskel's funeral last Tuesday. Many of them were the owners, managers, waiters, bartenders, cooks and customers at bars on the East Side and in Greenwich Village.

When Ash Miskel returned to the bar, Mr. Foley recalled, he said that the man had threatened that he would be back.

"He didn't pay any attention, and neither did I," he went on. "If I had a dollar for every time I've heard that, I'd be a rich man today."

But the man did return a couple of hours later. He and Mr. Miskel talked for a few minutes in the bar and then returned to the street. Mr. Miskel, it turned out, had knocked a couple of teeth out of the man's mouth.

"I followed them," Mr. Foley said. "I was standing a little way away when I heard Ash say, 'Go to hell, then. Pay for your own teeth.'"

"He started back to the bar. When he turned, the man pulled a butcher knife. He swiped at Ash in the side. When Ash turned around, he came in overhead into his belly. I rushed over."

"We had been tight since 1960," said Mr. Malone. "When I met him, he was tending bar at Louie's on Sheridan Square. After that he worked at Chumley's and the Limelight. He had his own place, Asher's, on Christopher Street for a while. He tended bar in Las Vegas and was a waiter at the Coward. He was working at Hudson's Bay on Second and 75th when I brought him in here 15 months ago."

"Ash and I roomed together on Jones Street for two-and-a-half years back in the 1950's," said the Rev. Mr. Berger. "We had remained close friends ever since."

Mr. Berger, an ordained rabbi, is the cantor of the Fort Lee Jewish Center. He delivered the eulogy at the funeral.

"Ash came over here from Israel in 1954," Mr. Berger said. "He married an American girl he had met over there, but it didn't last. He had been in the Israeli armed forces. His brother, Mickey, is the senior non-commissioned officer in the Israeli Army. His sister is the chief of police in Ramat Gan. It is an old Sabra family."

FISCAL SQUEEZE IN DANCE FEARED

'Saturation' Also a Problem. Conference in City Is Told

By ANNA KISSEGOFF

The Association of American Dance Companies, a national organization founded with Federal aid to serve the needs of the country's dance companies, closed its 10th annual conference yesterday amid warnings that the past decade of expansion in the dance field would be followed by a "financial squeeze."

Senator Dale Bumpers, Democrat of Arkansas, was the keynote speaker at the conference, which opened Wednesday at the Statler Hilton Hotel and was attended by administrators from the 350 companies assisted by the association. Betty Ford is honorary chairman of the organization.

In his talk on Thursday, Senator Bumpers noted that the amount of Federal aid to the arts was still the equivalent of the cost of only one B-2 bomber.

On Friday, the association's annual awards ceremony was presented to Walter Terry, former dance critic for The New York Herald Tribune and now dance critic for Saturday Review. Mr. Terry, who published his first review in The Boston Herald in 1936, was cited for "40 years of distinguished service to American dance."

Most crucial issues' Saturday's session included a panel discussion of the most crucial issues facing American dance. Harvey Lichtenstein, director of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, said: "The most pressing problem across the board is one of money."

A similar idea was expressed by David White, who spoke for the smaller modern dance companies as general manager of Dance Theater Workshop. "There has been growth," he said, "but it has been undifferentiated growth. Dance is undifferentiated to outside eyes, including funding agencies. These factors will affect us. The problem will have to be how to band together to use a smaller pot of resources."

"There is also a problem of saturation. Many companies in New York will have to move out or go out of business. The New York audience can't support the incredible amount of dance activity evident this year."

During the conference delegates heard representatives of 16 organizations that service the theater, opera, foundations and symphonies discuss their own policies. Don Anderson, director of the University of Utah's Institute of Arts Administration, was conference chairman.

Mr. Gedda in traditional and classical works, as well as offering a general selection of Slavic, a cappella chorales. Though well prepared and energetically conducted by Vladimir Roudenko, its 88 members seemed predominantly young and thin-voiced, and the tenors and deep basses were undermanned.

Ideally, the throbbing, soulful music the choral society entails requires more tonal vibrance, and more sheer volume, than yesterday's performance demonstrated.

Second Work The second work he has been writing here is tentatively called "Un Chien Dans ma Chambre"—"A Dog in My Room." Mr. Williams says it will be a short play with three or four characters. "A kind of a vaudeville with I hope, some humor in it."

But writing here, he said, has been difficult. Aside from running out of typing paper and paper clips, Mr. Williams is simply not enjoying the movies and the mood. He has been avoiding cocktail parties and is worried that the festival might refuse to pick up the bill for the Hotel du Cap. He is also avoiding the hundreds of journalists here, and the public.

"The other night, having dinner between two pictures," he said, "a woman leaned across from another table and said, 'How does it feel to be a superstar?'"

Canada Introducing Arts Fete in Kingston

By ROBERT TRUMBULL

Kingston, Ontario—This historic lakeside city, once Canada's capital, will become a showcase for Canadian talent in a full range of the arts this summer.

The display of visual and performing arts will add a third outstanding event this year—and possibly every year—to the summer cultural calendar of southern Ontario, the others being the theatrical season presented annually at Stratford and the Shaw Festival at Niagara on the Lake.

Anybody expecting a bumbling sort of home entertainment hour at the Mostly Ushers concert at Alice Tully Hall must have been happily surprised by the mostly expert performances Saturday afternoon.

The 10 young staff members showed credible professionalism throughout the varied chamber music program, urged on by the enthusiastic nonpaying audience and their nonpaying colleagues. The whole ambience was very special, full of informal camaraderie, with lots of good music in the bargain.

Included on the list were Handel's Sonata in F for flute and guitar, played by Elizabeth Brown and Richard Layman; Ravel's Mother Goose Suite, played by Mary Jo Motyka and Ruth Sandweiss; Debussy's cello and piano Sonata, Daniel Eckert; two songs from Schubert's "Frauenliebe und Leben," Deborah Fanning, soprano, and Robert Hollander, pianist; and the Martinis Trio for cello, flute and piano. Mr. Neal and Miss Brown and Miss Eckert.

Christopher Aber, a performance porter at the hall, joined Miss Brown for his skillfully crafted Dialogue for Two Flutes, and Edward Neuwirth, Tully's house manager, composed the new piece Prelude and Fugue for Organ.

As noted, all proved to be capable artists, and at least three showed greater potential than that: Miss Brown already secure in her flute virtuosity; Miss Eckert an impressive keyboard partner in the Martinis and Debussy pieces, and Mr. Hollander, whose piano accompaniments were shaped with unusual sensitivity. ROBERT SHERMAN

Return to Forever Band, at Beacon. Ends U.S. Tour

By ROBERT PALMER

Return to Forever ended its most extensive American tour with three concerts at the Beacon Theater on Saturday and yesterday. Although the jazz-rock group is more popular now than ever before, its members will be taking a long vacation to work on individual solo projects following the Beacon concerts, and one wonders whether they will be returning.

The experience of playing in Return to Forever does not seem to have benefited all of the musicians. The younger members, Al DiMeola and Lenny White, have shown remarkably fast growth, but the group's founders, Chick Corea and Stanley Clarke, seem to have stagnated, especially as composers.

Mr. Corea and Mr. Clarke are still brilliant improvisers. Mr. Clarke's unaccompanied string bass solo was the highlight of the first Beacon concert, with Mr. Corea's acoustic piano work running a close second. Their most recent compositions for the group are more problematic. The musicians execute them with astonishing precision, but the effects seem too calculated. Often, detail is added in the wrong places, and the compositions become mere catalogues.

The outstanding tune of the group's opening electric set was Mr. White's "Sorcerer," which developed in a logical, uncomplicated manner and featured sterling solos from all hands.

Third World Elements With Eddie Harris Eddie Harris, a pioneer of jazz electronics, and Third World, a Jamaican reggae and rock band, shared the Bottom Line's stage over the weekend. The pairing was a particularly pel-promising Frilly, and top-notch rhythm section work. A few rough edges need to be ironed out, but Third World connects; the encore the band took were well deserved.

Eddie Harris is a fluent saxophonist whose contributions to the fusion music of the 1970's are too often overlooked. These days he plays keyboards, sings his ironic blues, and does comic monologues liberally sprinkled with four-letter words. He is entertaining in those roles, but much more interesting on the tenor saxophone, which he transforms into an orchestra with his various custom-made electronic devices.

William Westney Chooses OrNSTein in Piano Debut

There has been a good deal written lately about the "futuristic" music of Leon Ornstein, but very few pianists have bothered to get, learn and play the pieces. One who has is William Westney, and Saturday night, the New York-born prizewinner (of the 1975 Geneva International Competition) took the unusual and highly effective step of leading off his Alice Tully Hall debut with Ornstein's "Three Moods."

Although their propulsive dissonance is no longer frightening, one can understand the audience shock of 1914 at the unbridled passion of these dramatic miniatures. Mr. Westney played them marvelously, with power, flair and remarkable clarity.

Interpreting Mr. Westney did not seem to bring the same degree of personal conviction he did to the fast, glittering ones. Thus the introspective "Hommage à Rameau" sounded rather matter-of-fact alongside the bustling "Mouvement."

Back in the 20th century Mr. Westney brought beguiling lightness, even elegance, to Schoenberg's Suite (Op. 25) before capping his impressive recital with a swirling, crystal-clear account of Liszt's Hungarian Rhapsody No. 12.

Ali Unhurt as Stage Collapses; Weighs 220 for Tonight's Bout

Muhammad Ali being helped after the stage he was standing on in Munich, West Germany, collapsed yesterday moments after the weigh-in for his title fight with Richard Dunn tonight.

MUNICH, West Germany, May 23 — Muhammad Ali weighed in today at the lightest since regaining the world heavyweight championship, stepped off the scales, and moments later the stage collapsed at the Circus Krone-Bau, tumbling the champion and about 25 other persons through a hole in the wooden floor.

Baeza Is Reported Ill at Home

Two questions of importance were answered yesterday at Belmont Park: Mr. Harold P. Whitmore's Sir Lister was the best of the $57,700 Peter Pan and Braulio Baeza, mysteriously absent from Saturday's program, was safe at his Garden City, L. I., home.

The game seasawed back and forth like two gleeful boys who never grew tired. The Red Sox scored twice in the third off Rudy May, the Yankee starter. The Yankees matched that in their half of the third.

Issue and Debate
What's Best Way of Scoring a Bout?

By LEONARD KOPPELT

When Muhammad Ali was declared the winner in his fight with Jimmy Young recently, two of the oldest controversies in sports were revived: what's the right way to determine the winner of a fight, and why shouldn't everybody know who's ahead while the fight is still on?

While distinct enough on one level, the two questions are closely related to another. One method of scoring used to judge a fight might lend itself much better to round-by-round announcements than some other method. Since there is no worldwide accepted standard for judging a fight in the first place, and since there is no truly effective centralized ruling body to impose any standards or procedures, the arguments for and against "posting the score" vary with the nature of the judgment being made.

The Background

A knockout, or any other outcome where one fighter can't continue, is an objective event. But picking the winner of a fight that both men finish in reasonably sound physical condition is entirely a subjective judgment.

ROME, May 23 (AP)—Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina survived a strong challenge by Victor Amaya of Holland, Mich., today and moved into the second round of the Italian open tennis championships. The scores were 6-3, 1-6, 6-1.

The New York Times/May 24, 1976

How do they exercise that judgment? One simplistic way would be to look at both fighters when the fight ends and decide which fared better. Or one could simply rely on an overall impression throughout the fight.

So point-scoring within rounds was devised. There is no single universally adopted system for this either, but most work on the following principle: the winner of the round is given 10 points, the loser 9 or less, an even round is 10-10; but it takes a decided margin, perhaps a knockdown, to make a score 10-8, and anything below 10-7 is very rare.

In any case, every judge looks at every round through his own preconceptions. Some give more weight to "aggressiveness" than others. Some pay more attention to the number of blows struck, some emphasize the damage done by effective blows.

or time. Since the boxing judge is being almost entirely subjective, however, the crowd's response to his decision on Round Two may affect his judgment on Round Three.

Against Posting

The idea of giving the score after each round seems so natural that the real question is why there hasn't been more pressure to adopt it long ago.

1. Effect on the crowd—professional prize fights openly appeal to partisanship in the audience, and all the traditional publicity stunts raise strong emotion among spectators.

2. Effect on judges—it is acknowledged that in all sports, referees and umpires may be influenced to some degree by crowd reaction.

The Outlook

A few experiments have been made in the past with the announcement of decisions round by round, but they were abandoned. Until and unless some truly powerful centralized system for regulating all boxing is developed, no general change is likely to be carried out.

A HAPPY MEDIUM

A happy medium is one that helps you put your message precisely where your market is. To help you find it, TIME has invented AMĀZ—Analysis of Media According to Zip. AMĀZ is a computerized system that analyzes GRP distribution of a media schedule. AMĀZ can help you find the precise balance between television and print that's best for you, whatever your market, whatever you're selling. The charts below show basically how AMĀZ works. Your TIME representative can provide you with all the ins and outs.

SALES PATTERN: BRAND X

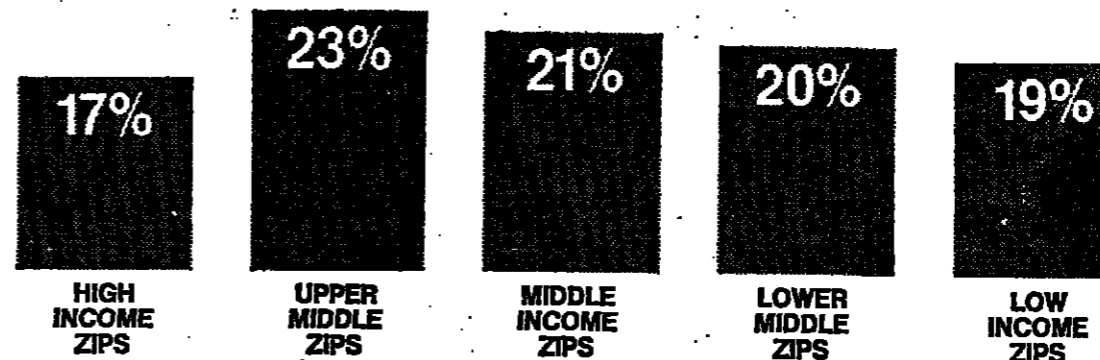

(Read: 35% of the sales for Brand X are in high income Zips)

1 First, AMĀZ pinpoints where your product is sold. This is the actual sales pattern for a moderate priced imported car. As you see, over four times as many cars are sold in high income Zip areas as in low income Zips.

TELEVISION COVERAGE

2 Second, AMĀZ measures the distribution of a television campaign across Zip areas. The package for the imported car included prime time 30:60s on two networks. Cost: $1.4 million. Where sales potential is strong television is weakest.

MAGAZINE COVERAGE

3 Third, AMĀZ identifies positively where magazines have their strongest penetration. The combination of TIME, Newsweek, Sports Illustrated and U.S. News closely matches the actual sales pattern for the import. And their GRP delivery in high income Zips can't be matched by any comparable television buy.

A HAPPY MEDIUM

4 Fourth, AMĀZ helps achieve a happy medium. It demonstrates that an advertiser, by switching about one-third of his television dollars into four newsmagazines, can markedly improve his advertising pressure in prime sales area. This marketer made such a switch, to good effect.

Art Posters Drawing In Profits

By RITA REIF

Posters—once viewed as a lowly art form for college students or Park Avenue matrons—have come of age. Now they are the walls of corporate headquarters, banks, hospitals and Federal agencies.

That evolution during the art of the 1960's was not about in part by Originals Ltd., which conceived of art posters as a big business package. Originals not only produced by publishing posters but also framed and then at a profit.

It took a while before Mr. Farland showed a profit. Within months after Mr. Farland began selling posters by mail, he had a partner, Evelyn Davidoff, who combined a discriminating eye for art

CONTINUING RISE SEEN FOR RATES

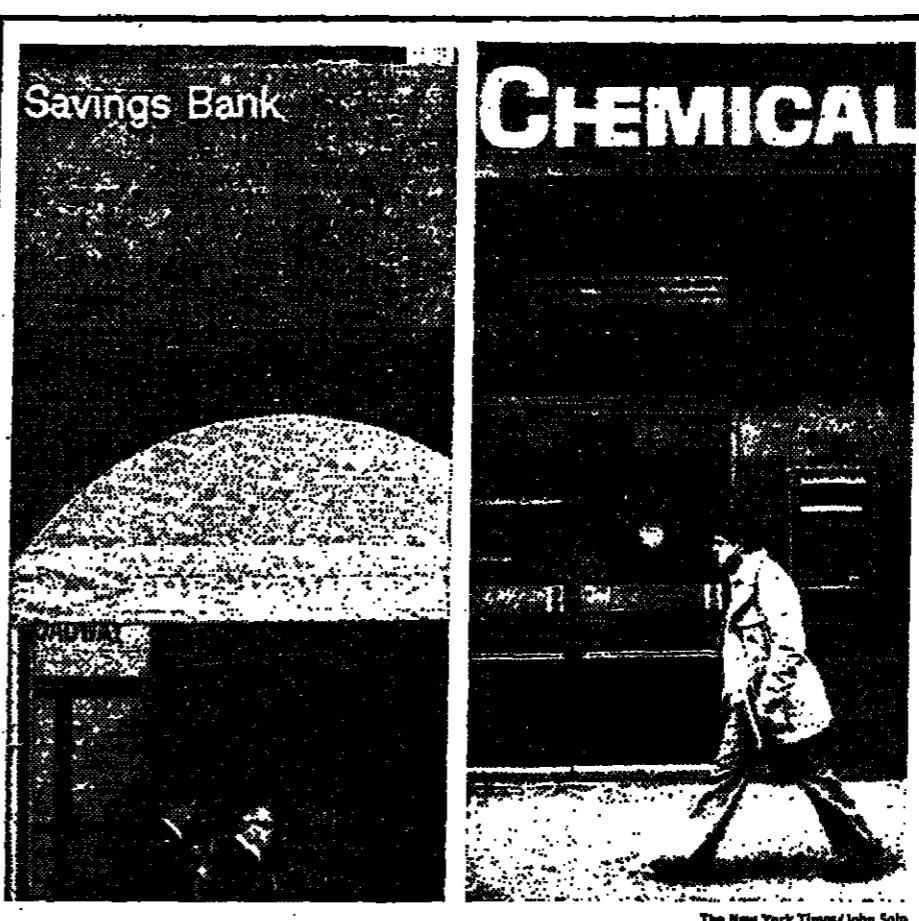

But Some Experts Believe a Pause Is Possible, With Fed Reviewing Tactics

By JOHN H. ALLAN

Interest rates have been climbing for four weeks, and they have reached their highest levels so far in 1976. But, even so, the dominant view among bond dealers and investment bankers is that credit rates are headed still higher. Once again, however, some money market analysts believe that the upward push in rates could well pause as the Federal Reserve stands back and surveys what impact it has made on the growth of the money supply.

Early last week, after the Federal Reserve had encouraged a half-point rise in the Federal-funds rate to 5 1/2 percent from 4 1/2 percent in mid-April, it was widely speculated that the Fed might hold the rate steady for a while. But that conclusion proved wrong. The funds rate moved up to 5 1/2 percent.

Consequently, there seemed less conviction in Wall Street last week that the Fed would decelerate the drive toward higher short-term interest rates right now. Many retinued each other that the Fed last year helped raise the Federal-funds rate—the basic short-term interest rate—to 6 1/2 percent from 5 1/2 percent from May to September.

The Bowery is a savings bank, and Chemical Bank is a commercial institution

New Banking Bargains Likely With Checking-Account Law

By STEVEN RATTNER

Until now, only commercial banks could offer checking accounts, for which they usually charged a service fee either by the month or by the check or both. Commercial banks, which have 83 percent of the state's banking offices and 74 percent of the banking assets, still are alone in making business and most consumer-type loans and in a number of other services, such as credit cards and trust departments.

But the Albany bill also allows the thrift institutions to begin offering limited consumer loans. Customers will be able to write checks up to $1,000 above their balance and will be charged interest on the overdraft loans at a 12 percent annual rate.

"The commercial banks see extending the overdraft privilege to savings banks as a 'foot in the door' problem," said Assemblyman Irwin J. Landes, a Democrat from Nassau County and a member of the Banking Committee. "We are witnessing a creeping process that will gradually blur the distinction between the different types of institutions and lead to a unitary banking system."

Savings banks are mutual—technically owned by their depositors—with a primary function of making mortgage loans, mainly for housing, of 20 or 30 years' duration. The interest rate is currently limited under New York State's usury law to "negotiable order of withdrawal."

Arabs Step Up Oil Exports to West

THEODORE SEARAD

Soviet Union, taking advantage of high world prices for oil, shipped a record amount of crude oil to the West last week while holding down the price of oil to the West.

The high rate of overall exports was made possible both by a continuing rise in Soviet oil production—a 7 percent increase in 1975 to a daily average of 9.7 million barrels—and by a reduced growth in the domestic use of petroleum products. Domestic consumption in 1975 rose 5 percent, compared with an annual rate of 7 to 8 percent in previous years.

These findings emerged from an analysis of preliminary Soviet foreign trade statistics released in Moscow earlier this month. Detailed country-by-country data will be published later in the annual foreign trade handbook.

The oil-export trends coincide with a new Soviet energy policy that calls for greater use of coal and other low-grade fuels in power stations and the conservation of oil and gas resources for use in the manu-

Case for Stability

Nevertheless, there was some reason late last week for concluding that short-term interest rates (and long-term rates, too, probably) might stabilize this week.

For one thing, as Mr. Kaufman pointed out, the nation's money supply is "likely" to rise this week.

Alan C. Lerner, money market economist at the Bankers Trust Company, noted that securities markets generally overreact and so "some technical strength is possible at this point."

Anthony G. Lanston & Company noted that the Federal Reserve last Friday supplied temporary reserves to the banking system "at an earlier hour than usual"—an action that led

Realty Loans Sink Small Coast Bank

By ROBERT D. HERSEY JR.

The main problem at both banks appeared to be an over-extension of credit to the real estate industry.

In California, the four offices of First State Bank reopened this morning under Lloyds management, which submitted the best of three bids for the failed bank's assets. First State had an estimated 36,000 accounts and $54.27 million of deposits.

The F.D.I.C. said it advanced about $24.2 million for the transaction, but it expects this amount to be substantially reduced in the next several days as Lloyds buys additional First State assets.

First State's president, Edward U. Bevilacqua, declared in a lengthy telephone interview last night that the bank had experienced severe real estate loan losses last year that wiped out profits but he insisted that it suffered no capital erosion

Poor Nations Advised Their Gains Must Have Others' Backing

Economists Confer on Aspirations

By ANN CRITTENDEN

Special to The New York Times

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 23—"You can't always get what you want," the theme of a Rolling Stones hit song a few years ago, or an academic version of it, is the hard-hearted message that some of the world's most distinguished international economists seem to be sending the less-developed countries.

Implicit in this advice, dispensed at a conference here at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology last week of "the poor nations" call for economic change, is the moral that: if the developing nations really want concrete economic gains to emerge from the current rhetoric, they will have to come up with ideas that the rich countries can support in their own self-interest.

What many of these 50 economists, largely from the industrialized nations, also seemed to be saying was that the new economic order was not so much a program for economic reform as a set of political grievances and aspirations that had to be dealt with in political terms. And politics is the art of the possible and of compromise.

As Prof. Richard N. Cooper of Yale put it: "If we want to

3d World Improving Trade Position

The overseas deficit of the nonoil-producing developing countries will be less than was expected earlier this year and substantially less than last year's record shortfall, according to economists at the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company.

The improvement is due largely to increased demand for the less-developed nations' exports to industrialized countries as the latter recover from the recession. The poorer nations have also taken a number of measures to reduce their own imports, the bank analysis shows.

At the same time, the combined "current account" position of all developed countries may worsen by as much as $12 billion—from a $6 billion surplus in 1975 to a $6 billion deficit in 1976, according to Morgan.

The bank projects a deficit on current account (including trade in goods and services and private capital flows) of $29 billion for the developing countries.

This improvement will not be fully reflected in the poorer countries' borrowing requirements, however, because repayments of foreign debt will rise this year by as much as $2 billion, to an estimated $12.5 billion.

CHINA HESITATING ON FOREIGN TRADE

Cut in Imports and Exports May Reflect Its Political Self-Reliance Campaign

ECONOMIC FACTORS, TOO

2-Year Buying Spree Ran Up Deficit—Deals Delayed as Best Terms Are Sought

By FOX BUTTERFIELD

Special to The New York Times

HONG KONG, May 23—A recent slowdown in China's imports and exports is causing growing concern among some businessmen that China's current anti-rightist political campaign may be adversely affecting its foreign trade following several years of rapid expansion.

Analysts here caution however, that although the campaign may be making Chinese officials more hesitant to enter into long-term contracts several purely economic factors are also contributing to the trade cutback.

These include a sense that Peking may get better prices and terms by delaying some deals this spring. Another factor is an apparent effort to return to China's long-stated policy of maintaining an even balance of trade after a two-year buying spree. In that time China secured an estimated 100 new plants but ran up a deficit close to $1.5 billion.

Chinese officials themselves, in recent interviews with visiting delegations, have insisted that China's current political campaign will not effect its foreign trade.

Stress on Output

The campaign, which began last winter after the death of Prime Minister Chou En-lai, has been aimed against "capitalist roaders" who allegedly overstressed production and put too much emphasis on the purchase of foreign technology at the expense of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's call for class struggle and self-reliance.

The first fears of a trade slowdown arose when it was disclosed last month that China had reduced its purchase of Japanese steel for the first half of 1976 by 75 percent and cut back sharply on its shipments of oil to both Japan and the Philippines this spring.

At the same time, businessmen attending the spring session of the National Council for U.S.-China Trade and the American Liaison Office in Peking found that while American attention was about the same as last fall—with about 4,600 United States businessmen—American transactions totaled only about $23 million, or half of last fall's $40 million.

Notice of Exchange Offer by Municipal Assistance Corporation For The City of New York

8% 1976 Series 5 Bonds due July 1, 1991

To the Holders of Outstanding Short-Term Notes of The City of New York

Subject to the terms and conditions set forth in the Exchange Offer Official Statement dated May 21, 1976, the Municipal Assistance Corporation For The City of New York (the "Corporation") is offering to exchange with holders of up to $500,000,000 principal amount of certain revenue anticipation notes and bond anticipation notes of The City of New York with stated maturity dates of December 11, 1975, January 12, 1976, February 13, 1976, and March 12, 1976 and outstanding on the date hereof (the "City Notes") its 1976 Series 5 Bonds (the "1976 Bonds") in an aggregate principal amount equal to such aggregate principal amount of the City Notes tendered hereunder. The Corporation may, but is not obligated to, accept any amount of City Notes tendered in excess of $500,000,000. If a principal amount of City Notes greater than $500,000,000 is tendered to the Corporation and the Corporation determines either not to accept an amount greater than $500,000,000 or to accept an amount greater than $500,000,000 but less than the total amount of City Notes tendered, the Corporation will accept City Notes tendered on a pro rata basis as is more fully described in the Exchange Offer Official Statement.

Persons exchanging their City Notes pursuant to the Exchange Offer will retain the right to receive interest from the City for the period commencing on the stated maturity date or dates of their City Notes and concluding on the Expiration Date of the Exchange Offer.

The Corporation has no taxing power. The 1976 Bonds do not constitute an enforceable obligation, or a debt, of either the State or the City and neither the State nor the City shall be liable thereon. Neither the faith and credit nor the taxing power of the State or the City is pledged to the payment of principal of or interest on the 1976 Bonds.

The Exchange Offer will expire at 5:00 P.M., Eastern Daylight Time, on June 21, 1976, unless extended at the election of the Corporation (such date and time, as they may be extended, being referred to as the "Expiration Date"). All tenders are revocable until 3:30 P.M., Eastern Daylight Time, on June 7, 1976, and thereafter are irrevocable. At the election of the Corporation, the Exchange Offer may be extended, but it is the present intention of the Corporation not to extend the Offer.

Holders of City Notes are urged to review the Exchange Offer Official Statement carefully. Those desiring to accept the Exchange Offer may do so by completing and executing the appropriate Letter of Transmittal and mailing or delivering it together with the City Notes so that such Letter and the City Notes are received not later than the Expiration Date by the Exchange Agent. Tenders by mail will be accepted only if actually received by the Exchange Agent on or before the Expiration Date regardless of the date of mailing. The Exchange Offer may also be accepted by making delivery (not mailing) at certain locations in New York City specified in the Letters of Transmittal.

Copies of the Exchange Offer Official Statement and the Letters of Transmittal may be obtained from the Exchange Agent, at The Chase Manhattan Bank, N.A., Citibank, N.A., Kidder, Peabody & Co., Incorporated, Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Incorporated, Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Salomon Brothers, and at many offices of other banks and securities dealers throughout the country. The availability of such documents from such organizations does not imply any recommendation by them as to the merits of the Exchange Offer or any representation by them as to the accuracy or completeness of the Exchange Offer Official Statement.

G.I. Homeowners Consider What to Do When the Old Mortgage Is Paid Off

By LEONARD SLOANE
"I'm 53 years old with a 4 percent G.I. mortgage on my home about to be paid off in another year. Should I or shouldn't I take out a new mortgage when the old one expires?"

This question from a Long Island middle-income executive is typical of those faced by many World War II veterans who bought houses with 25- or 30-year mortgages shortly after being discharged.

The answer cannot be given with any precision without an understanding of the individual, and his financial requirements and tax situation. A good approach, however, might be to list the pros and cons of such new financing.

An obvious advantage of a new mortgage is that the homeowner can continue to obtain substantial interest deductions from his Federal income taxes. This, of course, lowers the actual loan expense to a degree, based on the person's tax bracket.

What's more, self-liquidating mortgages—the kind in general use today—are computed so that the largest interest payments, and deductions, are taken in the earliest years. For instance, those holding a 25-year mortgage with an interest rate of 5 percent find that 60 percent of the entire interest due is scheduled to be repaid by the end of the 10th year.

Take the case of a married taxpayer filing a joint return with a taxable income between $20,000 and $24,000. He would be in the 32 percent tax bracket and therefore 32 percent of interest payments made each year would be an itemized deduction—just like medical bills and charitable contributions—thereby reducing his taxable income.

A long-term mortgage also may increase the salability of a house. A new buyer might assume the mortgage agreed and if the interest rate was adjusted in accord with present levels—by making a lower down payment—than he would when obtaining a mortgage on his own.

The proceeds from the mortgage loan can be used for any purpose the homeowner has in mind. Since the typical lender today will make a loan for about 75 percent of the home's current value, the borrower can use the balance for other purposes.

On the negative side, an important consideration is the fact that the homeowner is again committing himself to long-range borrowing. And this time, his mortgage expense will be much larger than the 4 or 5 percent that millions of World War II veterans originally paid.

For those who need to borrow funds, a home mortgage is one of the cheapest ways to do so.

Joint management of global resources—and specifically a tax on deep-sea fishing, oil drilling and seabed mining—was proposed as a new and relatively painless way of transferring wealth to the poorest nations.

A three-pronged approach to the world food problem, with separate programs for emergency food relief, food aid and grain-price stabilization, was suggested, including a provision for stockpiles to protect consumers in all countries against a repetition of the spurt in food prices that occurred between 1972 and 1975.

This approach could be combined with a food-insurance plan proposed by Prof. D. Gale Johnson of the University of Chicago calling for an international agency, or the American Government, to guarantee that any shortfall below a given level of production would be met from outside.

Professor Johnson suggested a shortfall of not less than 4 or 5 percent, to assure that the recipients would not be discouraged from production or stockpiling—problems that arise out of the massive United States food-aid programs of the 1950's and 1960's.

According to Robert Solow of M.I.T., who analyzed both of these food plans, they "could be a real way of improving the standard of living in poor countries."

Ironically, in spite of their relative modesty, almost none of these proposals is part of the many-faceted dialogue between rich and poor countries being conducted in various forums around the world.

Negotiations on food reserves are going on in Rome (under the auspices of the Food and Agriculture Organization) and in London (sponsored by the International Wheat Council, a producer-consumer forum). The talks are stalemated partly because they are attempting to achieve a comprehensive—and expensive—food security agreement to solve all the world's food according to Ale Sarris and Lance J.ponents of a m approach.

In the multilateral negotiations in G less-developed countries concentrating on preferential treatment their exports and the general trade between the United European Economic Community and Japan.

come tax, a public health program, and international peace."

The sun shone very bright in Poughkeepsie, on June 8, 1926, the day the 233 members of the class of '26 graduated. That afternoon a local newspaper headline announced: "33 Graduates Confer to Their Engagements. One Married Secretly Since 1924." Many of those who didn't yet wear rings headed for New York City. "We thought the world was going to be our oyster," said Katharine Fite Lincoln.

Some of the girls went on from college to European tours. Several became buyers at Macy's.

"I assumed there would be no difficulty combining career, marriage and a family," said Kitty Erickson, a slim, simply dressed woman who went on after Vassar to become a labor economist for the C.I.O. "It never occurred to me that out of the entire Vassar faculty, there wasn't one woman who had all three."

Many a Bang in Mini-Mint War

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY Wells, Rich, Greene may be losing a little Love, but it's going to get "a bang out of life."

The agency will be in charge of making advertising for the United States, Canada, Australia and Europe, Chalek & Dreyer, the current domestic agency, which also does international creative, introduced the product here in 1972, four years after it was introduced in Italy.

Tic Tacs, 40 mint, orange or cinnamon flavored pellets in a clear plastic box, sell for 25 cents but weigh less than roll candy (such as Life Savers) that usually sells for 15 cents.

But, as Ferrero points out, this would only be for food-store distribution and would not include the other retail outlets (drug and cigar stores, for example) where mini-mints are sold.

Distribution and advertising weight might well be the important factors in Dynamint's quick climb. The product has the backing of an estimated 700-person Warner-Lambert field force, while Tic Tacs are distributed by the Progresso Candy division of Imperial Tobacco of Canada, through food brokers.

Label It 'Made in New York State'

The State Department of Commerce is initiating a "Made in New York State" labeling campaign in hope of increasing sales of such goods within the state.

At a luncheon in the Cornell Club on Friday (featuring Long Island duck and potatoes, state-grown apples and spinach and wines from state vineyards), Commissioner John S. Dyson said the program would be supported by a public service advertising campaign, in which publishers and broadcasters have already shown an interest.

The first products to carry the labels will be Child Guidance toys and Tinkertoys, both made by Questor Education Products, which on its own had previously used the label "Made With Pride in the South Bronx."

Two years ago, when he was Commissioner of Agriculture, Mr. Tyson introduced a "Grown in New York State" label backed with in-store promotion material, which increased sales of state fruits and vegetables 20 percent. Now he wants to do the same for industry. Good luck.

Hotter than Kotter.

When Newsweek can deliver bigger ratings than Welcome Back, Kotter can, it's time to question an all-TV schedule.

If you want to reach men 18 to 49, you'll do very well with Welcome Back, Kotter.

It's one of television's most popular new shows. But here's a way to do even better.

Work out a print/TV mix that includes Newsweek, too.

Newsweek delivers ratings comparable to the top TV programs.

For example, with men 18 to 49, Newsweek has a rating of 19.4—which puts it ahead of shows like Welcome Back, Kotter, Baretta and even All in the Family.

In fact, Newsweek's rating tops the ABC News with Harry Reasoner, CBS News with Walter Cronkite and NBC Nightly News with John Chancellor combined.

Sound unbelievable? Have your media department check out the figures.

With television's soaring costs and limited availabilities, magazines such as Newsweek make more sense than ever.

You can get the same kind of ratings you expect from TV—and at a lower cost per thousand. In other words, more gross rating points for your money.

But what's even more important is the quality audience you're reaching. With Newsweek you reach people who are heavy magazine readers and relatively light TV viewers—the important market now known as "magazine imperatives."

This group includes 45% of all men 18 to 49, 54% of the men with household incomes of over $20,000 and almost half of all professional/managerial men.

The "magazine imperatives" account for 53.5% of all air trips purchased by men, 43.6% of the new cars, 41.9% of all the life insurance. They even drink 38.1% of the beer.

If you want to reach this major market, shift a portion of your TV dollars to Newsweek.

Transit Authority Accuses City on Bus Franchises

forked tongue." The Transit Authority notes that Mr. Levitt, in the last of a series of a dozen audit reports, gave the Transit Authority good marks for compliance with recommendations in the earlier reports. Mr. deRoos added: "We've always had a hosing from Mr. Tarshis. A private operator only goes after the profitable routes. As a result we get nothing. We also would like to get a little of the sweat, but the Bureau of Franchises always gives it to private operators." Mr. Tarshis declined to go into the relative merits of the competing applications for individual routes, but he made the following contentions: "In the great majority of cases the Transit Authority submitted an application for a specific route only after private companies had done so. A private operator pays the city 3 percent of its gross revenues, buys its own equipment and operates at no cost to the city, on the other hand, when the Transit Authority buys equipment for new routes it is paid for with tax money. Even if the Transit Authority had got all of the express routes granted to the private companies it would have grossed only $12 million a year in recent years and $17 million under the new $1.50 express bus fares. That would hardly reduce its $200 million deficit of about $200 million."

John G. deRoos

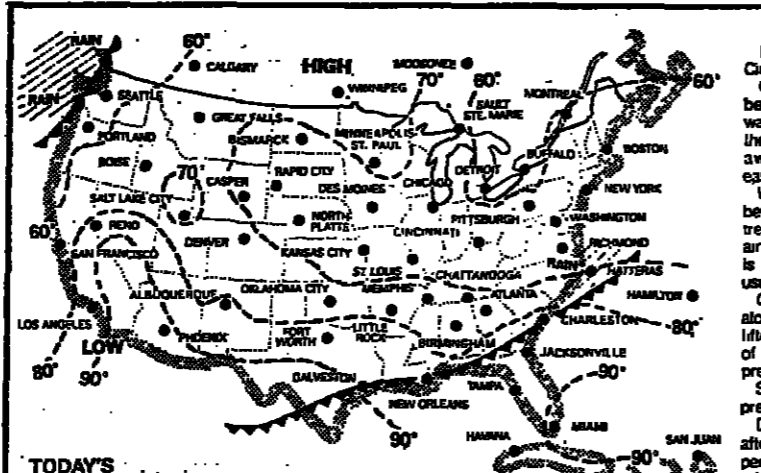

took over those same services. I'm certain the deficit would be $50 million," he contended. Mr. deRoos said that "it's not all that important who applies for a route first." Mr. deRoos's report contended that the repeated denials of Transit Authority applications cannot be plausibly explained since it holds "a clear comparative advantage over private operators" in meeting criteria established by the Bureau of Franchises: lowest fare offered, greatest area served, and "jurisdiction," that is, showing a history of serving the area involved. Mr. deRoos summed up his complaint: The franchise policy had been that "private industry is favored and the public is damned."

At least one medical witness at the lower court hearing on the parents' petition in October said he considered the high-calorie food formulas "extraordinary" care for someone in Miss Quinlan's condition. However, Dr. Morse reportedly has made it clear that he considers the administration of antibiotics and the intravenous infusion of fluids within standard medical practice and not extraordinary care. The Supreme Court also empowered Mr. Quinlan, as his daughter's guardian, to dismiss the attending physicians if they do not agree that her condition was hopeless and then to retain physicians who would

MEDICARE CLIENTS HELD OVERPAYING

Elderly New Yorkers Hurt by Mistakes, G.A.O. Finds

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, May 23—A General Accounting Office report has found that clerical mistakes and the generally poor management of the Medicare program is forcing tens of thousands of elderly New Yorkers—and probably millions across the country—to pay more for their health care than they should.

As a result of the study, Representative Elizabeth Holtzman, the Democrat of Brooklyn who ordered it, said she would introduce new legislation to end "mismanagement and legislative inadequacies" of the physicians' insurance portion of the Medicare program.

The 18-month study of Blue Cross-Blue Shield's administration of Medicare in 16 counties in southern New York State in 1974 found that because of administrative problems in the Medicare program many of the elderly and disabled persons were being placed in hardship—most often having to dip into their savings.

Almost half of 155,852 claims reviewed from Brooklyn in 1974, required additional payment to claimants, the report said, and more than two-thirds of 767 hearings challenging Medicare's payment resulted in the beneficiaries receiving more money.

Overall, New York Blue Cross-Blue Shield reduced two-thirds of all Medicare claims made in Brooklyn in 1974 an average of $23.03, the report said. Nationally, all Medicare insurance intermediaries reduced 60 percent of all claims an average of $14.29.

Amin to Talk With Sadat
CAIRO, May 23 (UPI)—President Idi Amin of Uganda will pay a three-day visit to Egypt starting Thursday, the Middle East News Agency said today. It said Mr. Amin would hold talks with President Anwar el-Sadat in Alexandria "to discuss international problems in general and African problems in particular."
